MLB POWER RANKINGS

Angels fall apart after keeping Ohtani

Gabe Lacques
USA TODAY

When fans look back on Shohei Ohtani's tenure in Anaheim, it will include a bottomless trove of eye-popping performances, from tape-measure home runs to double-digit strikeout games to historic double-duty, doubleheader performances.

It's just going to be a highlight-free reel.

The Los Angeles Angels did right by their fans and Ohtani, retaining him at the trade deadline and making some of the boldest moves on the market, bolstering hopes they'd snag a wild-card spot and lift the greatest two-way player in baseball history into his first postseason. Then they lost seven of their next nine games.

A maddening and ill-timed cold spell will almost certainly knock the Angels from playoff contention, despite importing pitchers Lucas Giolito and Reynaldo Lopez and sluggers Randal Grichuk and C.J. Cron before the trade deadline. The playoff-crushing blow might have been administered this weekend, when the Seattle Mariners came into Angel Stadium and swept four games, dusting the Angels in the wild-card standings and sending them below .500.

As if to epitomize this maddeningly frustrating era where both Ohtani and Mike Trout haven't been to the playoffs together, the Mariners won two games in their final at-bat and two games by one run, the weekend commencing when a fellow named Cade Marlowe hit a grand slam — just his second career homer — off All-Star closer Carlos Estevez to turn a 3-1 Angels lead into a 5-3 loss.

The Angels were punished appropriately in USA TODAY Sports' MLB power rankings, dropping four spots to No. 20, while the Mariners vaulted six places into 11th.

A look at this week's rankings:

1. Atlanta Braves (-)

- Their majors-leading 212 home runs are 34 more than No. 2 Dodgers.

The Angels, with Shohei Ohtani, lost their first six games of August.

JAYNE KAMIN-ONCEA/USA TODAY SPORTS

2. Baltimore Orioles (-)

- Now tied with Braves in, as old broadcaster Joe Angel would say, "the win column."

3. Texas Rangers (+1)

- Haven't lost since trading for Max Scherzer.

4. Tampa Bay Rays (-1)

- Season may rest on outcome of Shane McClellan's trip to arm specialist in LA.

5. Los Angeles Dodgers (-)

- 9-6 since debuting Freddie Freeman dance celebration.

6. Houston Astros (-)

- Chas McCormick and Jake Myers combine for 4.4 WAR — adding up to one elite center fielder.

7. Toronto Blue Jays (-)

- A weekend sweep at Fenway shows they can flourish down Bo Bichette.

8. Philadelphia Phillies (+4)

- Fans' standing ovation for Trea Turner moves his mother to tears.

9. San Francisco Giants (+1)

- Feeble offense (.709 OPS, 13th in NL) too often too much to overcome.

10. Milwaukee Brewers (-1)

- Suddenly a three-team race thanks to those fellows down Lake Michigan.

11. Seattle Mariners (+6)

- Blame these guys when Ohtani's watching from his couch in October.

12. Cincinnati Reds (-4)

- Time to show they aren't just a one-month fad.

13. New York Yankees (-)

- A lost first season in the Bronx for Carlos Rodon.

14. Chicago Cubs (+6)

- Won a series off the Braves, in case you didn't think they were serious.

15. Boston Red Sox (-4)

- Aimless team drifts to irrelevance.

16. Miami Marlins (-2)

- Eury Perez finally getting called back up. Is it too late?

17. Arizona Diamondbacks (-2)

- 26-38 against winning teams.

18. San Diego Padres (-)

- Rather large five-game trip to Seattle, Arizona.

19. Minnesota Twins (-)

- The AL Central, where a modicum of competence is rewarded.

20. Los Angeles Angels (-4)

- Mike Trout gonna return to the

Donald Glover pizza GIF.

21. Cleveland Guardians (-1)

- About time everyone learned how fantastic longtime Cleveland radio voice Tom Hamilton is.

22. New York Mets (-)

- Stunning how this club went from glitziest MLB team ever to the Syracuse Mets.

23. Detroit Tigers (-)

- Closer Alex Lange has a 7.32 ERA since June 4.

24. Pittsburgh Pirates (+1)

- The No. 1 overall pick as a catcher in 2021, Henry Davis has started exclusively in right field (and DH).

25. Washington Nationals (+1)

- Sweep at Cincy has them in rarefied power rankings air.

26. St. Louis Cardinals (-2)

- Last time they lost a series at home to Colorado, Albert Pujols was 29.

27. Chicago White Sox (-)

- Has any team taken more high-profile L's?

28. Colorado Rockies (-)

- For one day, Austin Gomber won the Nolan Arenado trade.

29. Kansas City Royals (-)

- 17 saves are fewest in majors, and 50% conversion rate tied for 29th.

30. Oakland Athletics (-)

- The record: 32-80. The run differential: Minus-271. Attendance for second "reverse boycott" game at Coliseum: 37,553.

Messi scores two, sparks Miami rally in Leagues Cup

Safid Deen
USA TODAY

Lionel Messi found yet another way to live up to the Messi Mania hype.

And Inter Miami is moving on in the Leagues Cup after a thriller in Dallas.

Messi scored two goals, including the equalizer to tie the score at 4 in the 85th minute, and Inter Miami advanced past FC Dallas with a 5-3 edge on penalty kicks Sunday.

Four games. Four victories.

And this one in comeback fashion for Messi, the World Cup champion with Argentina and seven-time Ballon d'Or winner, and his new club.

"I thought we had it," FC Dallas coach Nico Estévez said. "We put them in a really difficult position in this game."

Messi and Inter Miami advance to the Leagues Cup quarterfinals on Aug. 11 or 12, where they await the winner of Monday evening's Houston Dynamo

FC-Charlotte FC matchup.

Messi tied the score in the 85th with a brilliant free kick into the right side of the net.

If his game-winning free kick in his Inter Miami debut was the most memorable, this kick had to be the most exciting in his MLS tenure, helping Inter Miami crawl back out of a two-goal deficit in the second half.

"I think it's not much to say. I think everyone can see it," Estévez said. "It's obvious for him a free kick around there is like a PK for another player."

Messi's tying goal set the stage for the penalty kick shootout, for which he won the coin toss and then made the first goal.

FC Dallas' Paxton Pomykal missed the second kick, dooming the home team after an impressive performance considering the stage.

Benjamin Cremaschi, an 18-year-old Miami native of Argentinian descent, sealed the final kick for Inter Miami.

"I knew where I was going, and I knew how I was going to take it," said Cremaschi, who also sparked Inter Miami's comeback off the bench with a goal in the 65th minute.

Inter Miami trailed 2-1 at halftime, 3-1 to start the second half and 4-2 after an own goal by Robert Taylor in the 68th minute.

It felt like Inter Miami's own goal was the back-breaking blow, especially three minutes after Cremaschi's goal.

But Messi took over. Messi's free kick connected with FC Dallas' Marco Farfan, who scored an own goal of his own in the 80th minute, changing the tide of the contest.

And Messi's final free kick of the game, before the penalty shootout, helped Inter Miami storm back in dramatic fashion.

"You have this sensation that he's going to score," Inter Miami coach Tata

Martino said, likening Messi's penchant for scoring free kicks as a 90-10 advantage for Messi and 10-90 disadvantage for any other player.

It was Messi's first road game with Inter Miami, and the club's first deficit since Messi arrived.

It was also the first time Messi, Sergio Busquets and Jordi Alba started together like they did as FC Barcelona teammates in their heyday.

Alba made his presence felt with two assists, on Messi's opening goal in the sixth minute and later on Cremaschi's score.

But it appeared Alba's position on the left side was off-putting for Taylor, who had scored three goals in Messi's first three games but was ineffective in this match.

Messi did his part to carry Inter Miami, and Cremaschi's spark lifted the club to the next round of Leagues Cup play.
