Harbaugh: 1st gathering 'a great day'

Tyler Dragon
USA TODAY

COSTA MESA, Calif. – Los Angeles Chargers head coach Jim Harbaugh talked at the NFL scouting combine about how excited he was for April 2. On Tuesday, the date finally arrived.

The Chargers, Washington Commanders and Atlanta Falcons were the first teams to kick off phase one of their offseason programs on Tuesday.

Harbaugh likened the occasion to the first day of school.

"It's a great day. It's a great day for football, for meetings and training for a lot of baseline training," Harbaugh said. "It feels like there's a new lift and energy in the building. ... It was a good first day."

USA TODAY Sports was in attendance for the first day of the voluntary offseason program under Harbaugh. Here are the biggest takeaways:

'Lively' opening day

Phase one of NFL offseason workouts consists of meetings, strength and conditioning, and physical rehabilitation. Harbaugh didn't specify if the Chargers had full attendance on Tuesday, but franchise pillars such as quarterback Justin Herbert and safety Derwin James were in the building, per the team's social media page.

"We got right into football, putting the schemes in offensively and defensively, and baseline training. (Chargers executive director of player performance) Ben Herbert is huge in this phase," Harbaugh said. "Just finding out where everybody is. Where is their baseline and where do they need improvement on."

The offense and defense conducted separate meetings.

"It was lively. We're teaching different schemes," Harbaugh said of the two meetings. "It was good. I thought our coaches did a great job in the offensive meetings and the same with the defensive meetings. We'll have special teams meetings starting (Wednesday)."

'Best damn job'

Harbaugh's a seasoned head coach with head coaching jobs at San Diego (2004-2006), Stanford (2007-2010), San Francisco 49ers (2011-2014) and Michigan (2015-2023) before being hired by the Chargers in January. He's had success at every stop along the way including a Super Bowl 47 appearance with the 49ers and a 2023 College Football Playoff national title at Michigan. But Harbaugh professed the Chargers have left the best initial impression.

"This has been the best damn job I've ever had to start off with," Harbaugh said. "I hope it ends that way, but it's been a tremendous start. I'm excited about the coaching staff and the amount of work that's been produced over the last month and a half."

Positions of need?

Cornerback Kristian Fulton, linebacker Denzel Perryman, defensive lineman Poona Ford, center Bradley Bozeman and running back Gus Edwards are five of the biggest free agent additions by the Chargers.

The five players figure to have an impact on a Chargers squad that finished 5-12 last year. When Harbaugh was asked if the Chargers have any positions of need, the coach said he's still in the process of making that assessment.

Jim Harbaugh speaks at a press conference during the first day of offseason activities for the Chargers at Hoag Performance Center. KIRBY LEE/USA TODAY SPORTS

"Just finding that out," he said. "It's a great opportunity to find that out."

Wide receiver is a spot the Chargers are thin at after the team lost their top two pass catchers this offseason when Keenan Allen was traded to the Chicago Bears and Mike Williams was released and subsequently signed with the New York Jets.

Los Angeles owns the No. 5 overall pick in the 2024 draft and could target a wideout. LSU wide receiver Malik Nabers is taking a top 30 visit with the Chargers on Wednesday, a person familiar with the situation told USA TODAY Sports. They spoke on condition of anonymity because they aren't authorized to discuss the matter.

Play with physicality

Chargers tight end Hayden Hurst, who played for Harbaugh's older brother John in Baltimore, said his initial takeaway from the offseason program is the Chargers are going to play a physical brand of football.

"From what I'm understanding in the first round of the meetings, that's the mantra of this place. We're gonna be physical (and) we're gonna come at you," Hurst said. "When you see us pop up on the schedule, it's gonna be a long Sunday."

Mock draft

26. Tampa Bay Buccaneers – Jackson Powers-Johnson, C, Oregon

Offensive tackles Tristan Wirfs and Luke Goedeke set the tone for a season in which Tampa Bay defied expectations, but the play of the interior line proved problematic, particularly for a rushing attack that posted a league-low 3.4 yards per carry. Powers-Johnson should change that outlook quickly with his rugged approach.

27. Cardinals (from Texans) – Adonai Mitchell, WR, Texas

Fortunate break here for the Cardinals, who secure their long-awaited X receiver. At 6-2 and 205 pounds with 4.34-second speed in the 40-yard dash and impressive fluidity for a player of his build, Mitchell could become Kyler Murray's go-to target if he adds a little more consistency and polish to his approach.

28. Buffalo Bills – Ladd McConkey, WR, Georgia

After Wednesday's seismic trade sending Stefon Diggs to the Texans, the Bills are sorely in need of a top target for Josh Allen. A trade up – perhaps to the teens – to secure either Thomas or

In five seasons combined with Auburn and Oregon, quarterback Bo Nix threw for 113 touchdowns, including 74 with Oregon. MARK J. REBILAS/USA TODAY SPORTS

Mitchell might be the optimal route. If Buffalo stays put, however, McConkey would give the team a high-volume target who can consistently work himself in the intermediate area.

29. Detroit Lions – Laiatu Latu, DE, UCLA

A prove-it deal for Marcus Davenport shouldn't truly alter the outlook along the Lions' defensive line, where rising star Aidan Hutchinson needs a proper running mate. With a game much more advanced than what one would find from any of his peers, Latu boasts a skill set and consistency that should help him win over Brad Holmes and Dan Campbell if he slides.

30. Baltimore Ravens – Jordan Morgan, OT, Arizona

Always one to keep his eye on value

rather than just positional need, Ravens general manager Eric DeCosta might be somewhat boxed in this year by several of his team's losses in free agency – particularly along the offensive line, which bid farewell to both starting offensive guards as well as right tackle Morgan Moses. Morgan could be a plug-and-play option at any of the vacant spots while still potentially replacing left tackle Ronnie Stanley in the long term for Baltimore.

31. San Francisco 49ers – Chop Robinson, DE, Penn State

The addition of Leonard Floyd, among others, helped the 49ers recalibrate a pass rush that looked due for an adjustment after the Super Bowl, but it still would be wise to invest in a promising rookie. Robinson more than qualifies as just that, with San Francisco serving as a nearly ideal setting for him to hone his skills.

32. Kansas City Chiefs – Patrick Paul, OT, Houston

Amid all the speculation about the ways the Chiefs could use a premium pick to continue remaking their receiving corps, left tackle still stands out as a key spot without a clear resolution for the defending champs. Though Paul is a project, but molding a 6-8, 331-pounder with fleet feet and upper-echelon potential as a pass protector is the kind of task most offensive line coaches would relish.
