Aberg on course after layoff

Adam Schupak
Golfweek | USA TODAY NETWORK

For players like Wesley Bryan, this week’s Bubble Boy at No. 125 on the FedExCup Fall points standings, the RSM Classic at Sea Island Resort in St. Simons Island, Georgia, represents the end of the line to secure full exempt status for next season on the PGA Tour.

This is the final of eight Fall events for players to work their way into the top 125 (Nos. 126-150 receive conditional status), otherwise it is a trip to Q-School or a demotion to the Korn Ferry Tour. Jobs are on the line this week, but for the defending champion Ludvig Aberg, this week marks more of a new beginning.

The 25-year-old Swede capped off a remarkable rookie campaign last year by winning the RSM Classic in just his 11th professional start and doing so in record fashion: tying the PGA Tour’s 72-hole low scoring mark of 29-under 253.

Aberg avoided a sophomore slump, finishing second at the AT&T Pebble Beach Pro-Am and the Masters and finishing 16th at the Tour Championship in August, but he also dealt with a left knee injury that required arthroscopic surgery to repair a torn meniscus on Sept. 5 in New York. Aberg’s title defense marks his first start in three months and his longest stretch without playing golf.

“It’s been quite nice. I had surgery on my knee, so I had about four weeks off from golf. The first two weeks I did not miss it at all, I’m not gonna lie, but last couple of weeks it’s been itching in my fingers quite a bit. So it’s been nice to get back into practicing, playing a lot more at home,” Aberg said on Tuesday during his pre-tournament interview ahead of the RSM Classic.

Aberg withdrew from the Wells Fargo Championship in May, citing a knee injury, and after consulting with doctors continued to play the rest of the season knowing that surgery was in the cards. But he conceded that it hindered his game the back half of the FedExCup regular season and playoffs at least on the greens.

Ludvig Aberg, acknowledging the gallery during the final round of the U.S. Open in June, hasn’t played since August. JOHN DAVID MERCER/IMAGN IMAGES

“I couldn’t read the putts the way I wanted to. I couldn’t really squat down, that’s when it really hurt,” he explained.

After having surgery on his left knee, he spent the first couple of weeks in New York doing rehab and seeing the sites.

“Luckily, I was still able to walk, so me and my girlfriend were in New York and we were doing the city a little bit and kind of acting like tourists, so that was fun. Then we bought a new house and it’s been a lot of house stuff lately.”

Aberg previously had been renting a room from fellow countryman and Tour pro Vincent Norrman in Tallahassee, Florida, but purchased a place with his girlfriend in Ponte Vedra, Beach, Florida, not far from TPC Sawgrass and the Tour’s Global Headquarters.

Of becoming a homeowner, he joked,

“kind of getting old and getting a lot of grownup points in that space.”

Aberg made the short drive across the Georgia border to this picturesque corner of southern Georgia – halfway between Savannah and Jacksonville, Florida – where he not only won the RSM Classic but also the Jones Cup, one of the premier amateur events in the country.

Can he recapture his usual magic in the Golden Isles?

“I feel 100%, otherwise I wouldn’t be here,” he said. “And yeah, I had about four weeks off from playing golf, I didn’t touch a golf club. Started hitting short pitches and wedges at first and then to kind of load it a little bit more and put more pressure on it.

“Now I’m actually a little bit stronger now than I was before, so that’s good.”

122 That was Ludvig Aberg’s record for lowest 36-hole score on the PGA Tour (rounds 3 and 4 last year) and tied the tour record for lowest consecutive 36-hole score (any rounds), tying Troy Matteson at the 2009 Fortinet Championship (rounds 2 and 3).

Keep an eye on ...

- Brian Harman. The St. Simons Island resident is making his first start since competing as a member of the winning U.S. side at the Presidents Cup. Ranked No. 24 in the world, he is making his 13th start at the RSM Classic, finishing a career-best second in 2022.
- Nico Echavarria. The Colombian is one of the hottest players in golf, having won the Zozo Championship, finishing T-6 at the World-wide Technology Championship and cooling off a bit with a T-29 at the Butterfield Bermuda Championship. He has climbed to No. 59 in the points standings and has a lot at stake this week – Nos. 51-60 after the RSM Classic will serve as the Aon Next 10 for the AT&T Pebble Beach Pro-Am and the Genesis Invitational.
- Wesley Bryan. The popular YouTube personality is trying to win back full exempt status for next season. He starts the week on the bubble at No. 125 after shooting 61 in the third round in Bermuda and finishing T-17. He’s made the cut in all five starts that he’s made during the fall.

Thompson preparing for emotional farewell

Tom D’Angelo
The Palm Beach Post | USA TODAY NETWORK

NAPLES, Fla. – Lexi Thompson packed all the essentials for her final chapter as a full-time member of the LPGA tour.

Clubs. Balls. Tees.

And plenty of shoes and gloves.

“I have my usual gloves and shoes to be signed for all the fans,” she said. “I’ll be giving out some shoes. I don’t have that many anymore. I’ve given out so many.”

The tradition started about 15 years ago when Thompson was a teenage prodigy. Then she started seeing pictures of little girls holding up her shoes. Now, those pictures are on her desk at home.

“To see the smile on fan’s faces and the impact, that means more to me than anything,” Thompson said.

Ready to enjoy and lead a ‘more normal life’

A flood of emotions will come over Thompson on Sunday as she walks down the 18th fairway at Tiburon Golf

Thompson

Club. There will be other Sundays, but not nearly as many, as she plans on playing only a few events each year.

But as far as going through the grind of about 20 competitive events and other obligations each year, and traveling around the world to play golf tournaments, those days are over.

Thompson, 29, is retiring from full-time golf. Although she will not be joining the early-bird and pickleball crowd as a full-fledged South Florida retiree, she is looking forward to a much more relaxed schedule. She will be living “more of a normal life,” one that will include spending more time on her business, Lexi Fitness, traveling for pleasure, and picking up another hobby or two.

“I am just going to embrace the week,” said Thompson, who made the announcement in May. “After the announcement it was an emotional few weeks not really knowing what to expect with the reaction from everybody, but it’s been incredible.”

And it’s fitting one of the most popular and influential golfers ends her official season at the CME Group Tour Championship (she will be teaming with Rickie Fowler at the Grant Thornton Invitational next month at Tiburon), after not qualifying for the event for the first time last year. She is in the field this week by virtue of finishing 50th on the points list.

Thompson missed four straight cuts during a six-week stretch starting in April but rebounded with three consecutive top-10s, including runner-up at the Meijer LPGA Classic. She has not won on the tour in nearly five years, her last victory at the 2019 ShopRite LPGA Classic.

But her favorite memories since deciding golf would no longer be the focus of her life were not about one shot, one hole, one tournament.

But the notes. The signs.

And the smiles.

“Just the amount of love from the fans and everybody that has supported me throughout my career, whether it’s messages through Instagram or notes or signs that people make or give to me at the end of my round,” she said. “It puts me in tears because that’s why I played the game. I wanted to make an impact on the sport.”

She has ... beyond breaking glass ceilings along the way.

Thompson is an 11-time tour winner, including one major at the 2014 Chevron Championship in The Woodlands, Texas. She has won 15 times worldwide.

She also is a two-time Olympian and a seven-time U.S. Solheim Cup team member.

In October 2023, Thompson became the seventh woman to compete in a PGA Tour event at the Shriners Children’s Open in Las Vegas. She was the second woman to break 70 in a PGA Tour event, shooting a 69 in the second round. Her 36-hole total of even par missed the cut by three shots.

And with nearly $15 million in prize money, Thompson is ninth on the all-time LPGA money list.

But as much as any golfer, she has connected with and inspired young girls and boys. And she has been open about her mental health struggles.

“Seeing the smiles on their faces,” she said about the kids. “Whatever it is that I was a role model, that’s meant more than anything.”
