Hamilton's Ferrari debut set for F1's 2025 opener

Ian Ransom
REUTERS

MELBOURNE – Lewis Hamilton will launch his bid to win the drivers' championship at a third Formula 1 team when he makes his much-anticipated debut for Ferrari in the season-opening Australian Grand Prix on Sunday.

Formula 1's most successful team has not won a championship since the 2008 constructors' title, and Hamilton, moving from Mercedes to Maranello, arrives chasing a record eighth.

Hamilton's switch has sent fans into a frenzy in Italy and Melbourne's big Italian community will be out in force at Albert Park as the lakeside circuit hosts the opener for the first time since 2019.

Ferrari, runners-up to McLaren in the 2024 constructors' championship, celebrated a 1-2 in Melbourne last year when Carlos Sainz, who has since moved to Williams, won the race ahead of teammate Charles Leclerc.

Hamilton

McLaren may be set to steal Hamilton's thunder after encouraging performances in winter testing with F1 data showing it was quickest on low fuel in Bahrain and had an advantage over Ferrari on race pace.

That would have been music to the ears of Australian fans cheering for McLaren's Oscar Piastri as he looks to become the first home driver to win the race since it was added to the F1 world championship calendar in 1985. The Melbourne native finished fourth last year at Albert Park behind third-placed teammate Lando Norris.

Briton Norris, the bookmakers' preseason favorite for the championship, may well be Piastri's biggest obstacle to a drought-breaking win for Australia.

Red Bull's defending champion Max Verstappen will launch his bid to become the second man to win five drivers' titles in a row following Michael Schumacher. Red Bull finished third in the constructors' championship last season. After doing the least amount of laps at winter testing, the pace of the car remains to be seen. "We learnt a lot from testing but there is still a lot more work to be done," Verstappen said in a race preview issued by Red Bull on Tuesday. "We have ideas about what we can do and how we can take on what we learned at testing, so we will see how we go when we start driving on the track."

Verstappen has a new teammate in New Zealander Liam Lawson.

Lawson is among six drivers at Albert Park who will race in an F1 season-opener for the first time.

There will be plenty of interest in how 18-year-old Italian Andrea Kimi Antonelli fares in his F1 debut for Mercedes, having stepped into Hamilton's huge shoes at the Brackley-based team.

British teen rival Oliver Bearman will drive for Haas after being a reserve for the U.S. team last year, while young Frenchman Isack Hadjar, the F2 runner-up, will debut at Racing Bulls.

Brazilian F2 champion Gabriel Bortoleto will step up for struggling Sauber while Australia's Jack Doohan will hope to make an instant impression amid speculation he may only be warming the seat at Alpine for Argentine reserve driver Franco Colapinto.

DeVries will return Indiana to prominence

Gregg Doyel

Indianapolis Star
USA TODAY NETWORK

Darian DeVries will leave West Virginia's basketball program to be the head coach at Indiana. BEN QUEEN/IMAGN IMAGES

The Indiana basketball program has hired West Virginia's Darian DeVries as coach, and I love it. Could I love it more? Yes, but only if DeVries changed the way he spelled his last name. What would look better? S-t-e-v-e-n-s. But Brad Stevens wasn't coming to save IU men's basketball. Which means IU athletic director Scott Dolson needed another superhero.

And Darian DeVries looks great in a cape.

Would DeVries look even better in the 2025 NCAA Tournament? Well, sure. The vaunted Indiana Hoosiers just hired a coach who didn't reach the NCAA Tournament, and that looks weird. And they rushed to hire that coach, because the NCAA Tourney hadn't begun – not even the First Four, which isn't the NCAA Tourney at all – before Dolson panicked and hired a coach and it's just so weird, isn't it?

Weird is good in this case, because weird makes you take a closer look at Darian DeVries. And unlike its last two hires, IU clearly took a closer look before making this one.

Know who wasn't a weird hire? Mike Woodson wasn't weird. Not for Indiana four years ago. He was older, sure, but still just 63. He was an IU alum, a legend who played for Bob Knight. He was from the biggest city in Indiana. He had NBA head coaching experience. The Hoosiers had tried to go outside the Knight family with its last three hires, from Kelvin Sampson to Tom Crean to Archie Miller, and it hadn't worked. Once and for all, the school – and Dolson, making his first men's basketball hire with help from two meddlesome boosters – went for an alumnus. Didn't work, but it wasn't weird.

Know who else wasn't a weird hire? Archie Miller. That guy was a home-run hire in 2017, and not just a home run – but a grand slam into the upper deck. That, actually, was what I wrote the day then-AD Fred Glass announced the hiring of Miller – comparing the move to a tape-measure tater – because what was weird about hiring Archie Miller? Perfect pedigree, as the son of a Pennsylvania high school coaching legend and the brother of Arizona's legend-in-the-making, Sean Miller. Won huge at Dayton, where everyone wins huge, but never mind that. This was an easy hire.

Darian DeVries wasn't easy. Not unless you looked carefully.

Look carefully, IU fans, and here's what you'll find:

Darian DeVries has won big at schools where the time or place – or both – wasn't conducive to winning big.

What's he going to do, now that he's finally at a school where the time and place – both – are right for a return to the top?

You like IU basketball hire?

First glance, I was like some of you: didn't understand this hire. Was on the phone with my best friend, who happens to be a basketball expert, and was telling her: This is a weird hire. Darian DeVries? All I know about that guy are two things:

One, he's been winning because his son plays for him, and his son is the best player on the court.

Two, even with his son, he didn't win enough at West Virginia this season to get the Mountaineers into the NCAA Tournament.

And this is who IU hired? Before the NCAA tourney even began, before more sensible targets – better coaches – started becoming available after their team lost? Thinking here about Drake's Ben McCollum or Iowa State's T.J. Otzelberger or, who knows, Texas A&M's Buzz Williams.

Speaking of Ben McCollum ...

Now there's a guy who can win at Drake without having the best player on roster. Or any player on roster, really. McCollum replaced DeVries last season, after DeVries went to West Virginia and took with him his son – 6-foot-7 guard Tucker DeVries, the two-time Missouri Valley Conference Player of the Year – and pretty soon almost everyone on that 28-7 Drake team was in the transfer portal.

McCollum comes in, starts over, brings in a ton of players from his last stop at Division II Northwest Missouri State, and goes 30-3. Drake's in the 2025 NCAA Tournament, by the way, and if it matters, my company bracket has Drake reaching the Final Four. Because Ben McCollum looks that good.

Did Scott Dolson get confused and hire the wrong guy from Drake? That was my first, cynical thought. Then came this: Tucker DeVries better have another three years of eligibility, or Daddy's going to have a rough time in Bloomington.

Look, just being honest here – and assuming those were the thoughts of a lot of IU basketball fans, too. Because if you were like me, you thought this hire was weird.

Turns out ...

DeVries won big and fast at Drake and West Virginia

First things first: Indiana outflanked Iowa for DeVries.

Why would IU need to outflank anyone for a hire as weird as Darian DeVries? Bear with me. And this hire wasn't weird at all. Stop calling it that! The Hoosiers nailed this hire, and people who know, know. The people at Iowa? They know. DeVries was at Drake for six seasons, from 2018 to 2024. You think Iowa didn't know plenty about Darian DeVries?

Iowa knew plenty, and knew it had to act fast to get him. Once Selection Sunday unfolded the way it did, with West Virginia being left out of the bracket in favor of an inferior North Carolina team – probably a coincidence that the chairman of the selection committee is UNC athletic director Bubba Cunningham – that meant DeVries was available, immediately, for interested schools.

And schools would be interested in DeVries. Why? Well, first: West Virginia should've made the NCAA Tournament. The Mountaineers were snubbed by a selection committee that lacked the courage, the integrity, to tell the AD at North Carolina: "Sorry, but while you were out of the room, we discussed it and decided your team wasn't worthy."

Does that make DeVries a more palatable hire, the fact that his 2024-25 West Virginia team – record: 19-13 – deserved a spot in the 2025 bracket?

This should help:

The record of the 2023-24 West Virginia team, the year before DeVries arrived: 9-23.

Now then, let's do like Dolson and look even harder. Dolson looked hard, and he looked fast, because he hired DeVries before Iowa could do it.

Now it's our turn to look at DeVries, so let's go back to Drake, OK? Go way back, before DeVries became the Bulldogs' coach in 2018.

When DeVries arrived, Drake had gone 10 years since its last NCAA Tournament appearance. And never mind the NCAA tourney – let's talk about the MVC Tournament. Before DeVries arrived, Drake had been relegated to the Valley's play-in game nine consecutive years from 2009 to 2017. That streak was broken in 2018 by first-year Drake coach Niko Medved, who went 17-17 and was considered such a genius for breaking even at Drake that Colorado State hired him.

Enter Darian DeVries, a longtime assistant at Creighton under Dana Altman and Greg McDermott. He took the job at Drake, where winning was impossible, and won 24 games that first season. Then he won 20, 26, 25, 27 and 28 games.

You know what that means? It means he turned around Drake in one season without his son, then won 26 games the next season without his son. Tucker DeVries was on those final three teams – when Drake won 80 games from 2022 to 2024 – and was, of course, on his dad's first team at West Virginia.

Something else you might not know, and by "you," I mean me until earlier Tuesday: Tucker DeVries played just eight games this season for West Virginia. He suffered a shoulder injury in December. He will apply for a medical redshirt, and surely follow his dad to Bloomington with one more year of eligibility.

Know what that means? It means Darian DeVries turned around West Virginia – 9-23 the year before, remember – despite getting just eight games from his best player.

You understanding what is happening here? IU just hired a coach who won at Drake like he was at the best job in the conference – say, Creighton – and then won big enough at West Virginia to belong in the 2025 NCAA bracket despite inheriting a program that had gone 9-23 the previous season, and a combined 44-55 the previous three seasons.

But Darian DeVries goes there and posts an immediate 10-win improvement, six years after going to Drake and posting an immediate seven-win improvement.

What's DeVries going to do at Indiana, where the NIL money is good and the winning ought to be great? You know what he's going to do – and he's just 49 years old. Indiana basketball just hired the coach who will bring this program back to prominence, and he'll be here a long, long time.

UNC makes First Four statement

Rodd Baxley
The Fayetteville Observer | USA TODAY NETWORK

At several points throughout the North Carolina men's basketball season, coach Hubert Davis has described his latest group of Tar Heels as the "quietest team" he's ever been around.

Davis has been pleading with his players to be loud in everything they do, consistently telling them they can't be quiet if they want to experience success on the court.

The communication of that message connected with the Tar Heels, who won eight of their final 10 games before March Madness. That surge helped UNC sneak into the NCAA Tournament as the last to secure an at-large bid.

It was a choice by the selection committee that brought controversy.

Davis

The 11th-seeded Tar Heels drowned out that noise, raising the level of their voices and play by sending a message with a 95-68 shellacking of San Diego State on Tuesday at the First Four in Dayton, Ohio.

"It's been a real focused group," Davis said Tuesday night before a brief pause. "Over the last two months, their commitment to team is just continuing to grow. I talked earlier in the year about how quiet this team was and the voices – the volume of the voices – is exactly where it needs to be. Whether it's in the huddle, on the bus, on the floor, just a real connected group right now."

Fifth-year guard RJ Davis and junior Seth Trimble heard the outside voices, but they didn't listen. Their focus was on amplifying their voices and beating the Aztecs (21-10), something the Tar Heels (23-13) did decisively.

"We know we deserve to be here. We're not looking to send a message to anybody else," said Trimble, who scored 10 of his 16 points in the first half to help UNC take a 24-point halftime lead. "We're just looking to compete as a team and be the team that we know we're capable of being. We're gonna do that when we get to Milwaukee and go from there. We hear what people say. We didn't really care about it. It is what it is, we're focused on us."

UNC advances to play No. 6 seed Ole Miss (22-11) on Friday in Milwaukee.

Alabama State wins on buzzer-beater

Tuesday's First Four games ran the gamut for the Men's NCAA Tournament, the first resulting in a heart-racing buzzer-beater.

Alabama State and Saint Francis, both 16 seeds, engaged in a back-and-forth battle between the SWAC and NEC champions. With the score tied at 68 with just seconds remaining on the game clock, the Hornets completed a Hail Mary-style inbounds pass and managed to get the go-ahead bucket with less than a second remaining for the 70-68 win.

The basket came on a pass from one side of the court to the basket from Micah Simpson. Amarr Knox caught the ball on a ricochet and scored.

The win was Alabama State's first in NCAA Tournament history. It will play Auburn on Thursday.
