Mercury's big comeback, Fever's bench lead WNBA winners and losers

Nancy Armour
USA TODAY

Oh, you thought the WNBA playoffs were going to be uneventful? Isn't that sweet.

The W's postseason continues to have zero chill. Both best-of-five semi-final series are tied up at a game apiece after the fourth-seeded Phoenix Mercury crawled out of a 20-point hole to beat the top-seeded Minnesota Lynx while the Las Vegas Aces returned to form and steamrolled the Indiana Fever.

Alyssa Thomas flirted with another triple-double, finishing with 19 points, 13 assists and eight rebounds in Phoenix's 89-83 overtime win over Minnesota. It was the first loss of the playoffs for the top-seeded Lynx, who swept their first-round series against the Golden State Valkyries.

A'ja Wilson played like the MVP she is (for a record fourth time), stuffing the stat sheet with 25 points, nine rebounds, five steals, two blocks and one assist. But it was an all-around effort in the Aces' 90-68 win over the Fever. NaLyssa Smith had a playoff career-high 18 points as well as seven rebounds and Jewell Loyd and Dana Evans added 10 apiece off the bench.

Both series will switch cities before Game 3 on Friday night Sept. 26.

"It wouldn't have been as fun going back 0-2," Mercury coach Nate Tibbetts said. "This is a five-game series. We haven't done anything yet. (But) we needed to get one here for sure."

Here are the winners and losers from Game 2 of the WNBA semifinals Tuesday Sept. 23:

WINNERS

Phoenix Mercury's refusal to quit

Coaches will never again have to sell their players on the idea that no game is out of reach. Just put in a tape of the last 20 minutes of the Mercury's improbable comeback in Game 2 against the Lynx.

Down 20 with 5:45 left in the third quarter, Phoenix outscored the Lynx 50-24 over the last 15 minutes of regulation and overtime.

"Just pride and toughness. Grit. I couldn't be more proud of our group with doing that," Mercury coach Nate Tibbetts said after the 89-83 win. "I believe this is our fourth game in seven nights. I was a little worried going into the game, but boy, they really responded in the second half. We just kept fighting."

Granted, Minnesota gave Phoenix plenty of help. The Lynx had five of their 18 turnovers in the third quarter and another three in OT. They were whistled for a five-second violation with 47 seconds left in regulation and clinging to a three-point lead. They were 7 of 28 from 3-point range.

But the Mercury had to take advantage of Minnesota's lapses and create their own luck, and they did both.

"We're confident. We're confident in us and we've been battling all season," said Satou Sabally, who was 5 of 11 from 3-point range and finished with 24 points. "You can't give up a basketball game if you're down whatever. I believed at halftime, and that's what we did."

Mercury's Sami Whitcomb saves Nate Tibbets

The Lynx did not do what Nate Tibbetts was expecting them to at the end of regulation.

With the Mercury trailing by three and getting possession after a timeout with 20.7 seconds left, Tibbetts thought Minnesota would foul. He drew up a play in anticipation of that during the timeout, only to have the Lynx keep their hands to themselves.

"I messed that up," Tibbetts acknowledged.

Sami Whitcomb put up a 3 that was way short, but Alyssa Thomas grabbed the offensive rebound. The Mercury passed the ball around until it got to Whitcomb again, and this time her 3-pointer was good to tie the game with 4.3 seconds left.

Napheesa Collier missed a jumper at the buzzer, sending the game into overtime.

"That was completely on me. Sami saved my ass," Tibbetts said. "That's what great players, great shooters do."

Whitcomb said she's put up 20,000 shots during practice this season, preparing for just that kind of moment.

"I was joking that it's 20,000 for one shot," Whitcomb said. "It's for these moments. Obviously, I would love to shoot a better percentage. But I feel like it shows up in moments like that."

Gritty performances

Mercury forward Kahleah Copper and Fever guard Lexie Hull can rest when the playoffs are over.

Copper rolled her right ankle when she collided with Kathryn Westbeld in the closing seconds of the third quarter. Copper grabbed at her ankle and was limping visibly, and she immediately headed back to the locker room when the quarter ended.

But Copper not only returned to the game, she made a big contribution in Phoenix's improbable win. Her 3-pointer with 1:47 left in overtime put the Mercury up 85-79 and, after a timeout, she blew up Minnesota's possession with a strip of Collier.

Hull was a late add to the Fever's injury list with a sore back. She played, however, and had 15 points, three rebounds and two assists.

"I'm feeling sore still," Hull acknowledged after the game. "It's part of the playoffs. It's the end of the season. Everyone's a little fatigued, a little sore. ...

It'll be a good rest day tomorrow. But I think that's for everyone. We're just pushing through."

Chelsea Gray doing Chelsea Gray things

There's a reason they call Chelsea Gray the Point Gawd.

Gray was dealing in the Las Vegas Aces' 90-68 rout of the Fever in Game 2. She had 10 assists, including a sick, no-look pass to Megan Gustafson with 1:21 left in the third that Patrick Mahomes would have appreciated. Gray had her head completely turned when she whipped a pass through traffic to Gustafson, who was beneath the basket and put the ball up for the easy bucket.

Gray also had three steals and six points before Becky Hammon pulled her starters with four minutes left in the game.

A'ja Wilson doing A'ja Wilson things

What A'ja Wilson does is not normal. It might seem like it, because she does it all the time. But it is not.

The Aces fell flat in Game 1 Sunday, hours after Wilson won her record fourth WNBA MVP award. No way she was letting that happen in Game 2.

Wilson led all scorers with 25 points, on 10 of 18 shooting, and also had nine points, five steals, two blocks and an assist. This despite not playing the last four minutes of the game.

And as Wilson goes, so do the Aces. They were more aggressive in Game 2, more active, more ... Aces. They contained Kelsey Mitchell, harassed the Fever into 18 turnovers and limited Indiana's bench to six points.

"We didn't come to work in Game 1, and that's on all of us," Wilson said. "Game 2, we just decided to come to work. When we do that and we do it the right way and we play the right way, good things happen."

"I told my team, I was honestly just embarrassed. More embarrassed than the 53-point loss," Wilson said, referring to a loss to the Lynx during the regular season. "Nobody panicked. It was just like, we've got to come to work. That's it."

LOSERS

Minnesota's composure

The Lynx are not a team that blows leads, beats themselves or makes dumb mistakes.

Yet here we are.

The Lynx were well on their way to a commanding 2-0 lead in the semifinals, up 20 points with just under six minutes to play in the third quarter. But Phoenix cranked up its aggressiveness and the Lynx became very un-Lynx like.

They began turning the ball over, usually without any prompting from Phoenix. They couldn't make shots. They were whistled for a five-second violation late in the fourth quarter and then didn't foul when they had one to give on what would be a game-tying possession for Phoenix.

"Phoenix did a good job coming out aggressive, but I think we beat ourselves," Collier said. "Unforced turnovers, not taking care of the ball when they were pressuring us. It's definitely frustrating, but it's a series. A long series. We're tied now. We've got to go to Phoenix and take care of business."

Indiana's short bench

It is incredible that the Fever have made it this far with a team that's being held together by duct tape and rubber bands. More often than not, they've found a way to make it work.

On this night, however, their lack of depth did them in.

Though four of Indiana's starters finished in double figures, they got almost nothing from their bench. Six points, to be exact. Brianna Turner didn't even take a shot in her 24 minutes, the first time in more than a month she didn't attempt a field goal.

Compare that with Game 1, when Indiana's bench chipped in 14 points in the Fever's win.

Indiana also had no answer for Las Vegas' aggressiveness. The Aces scored 28 points off Indiana turnovers and another 14 off offensive rebounds.

"They dictated and we were on our heels. We were passive. We were reactive. To everything," Fever coach Stephanie White said.

"They're too good. We can't spot them 42 points."

Lack of foul calls, again

Officiating, or lack thereof, has been a common complaint throughout the season. Why should the playoffs be any different?

Neither the Fever nor the Aces were happy with the physicality of Game 2. That's actually an understatement, given that Hammon said it was "out of control."

"Most of my assistants come from the NBA and they're like, 'This would not fly in the NBA. This level of physicality would not fly in the NBA. There would be fights,'" said Hammon, who was a longtime assistant with the San Antonio Spurs before coming back to the WNBA to coach the Aces.

"We just have very well-mannered women that can get to the next play. ... I'm not concerned because I know we'll keep our composure. But I don't understand. I don't get it. The freedom of movement is supposed to be a point of emphasis. Defensive three seconds is supposed to be a point of emphasis. I don't know why we have points of emphasis."

College September report card revealing

Paul Myerberg
USA TODAY

Arch Manning isn't going to win the Heisman Trophy. Clemson isn't going to win the national championship. Penn State still can't figure out how to beat a top-five opponent.

North Carolina and new coach Bill Belichick might not win a game against Power Four competition. No. 8 Indiana isn't going anywhere. No. 10 Georgia's defense has dropped off the map.

Those are just a few of the biggest takeaways from the first month of college football's regular season, which ends with the Big Ten and SEC dominating the US LBM Coaches Poll but no clear favorite for the national championship.

The stage is set for an unpredictable stretch before the College Football Playoff bracket is unveiled in early December. USA TODAY Sports looks back at the opening month of the regular season by crowning the best team, biggest surprise, Heisman favorite and more.

Best team: No. 2 Oregon

No. 4 Ole Miss has three SEC wins and a nonconference victory against Tulane. After beating No. 7 Texas in the season opener, No. 1 Ohio State added a strong road win against Washington last weekend. No. 3 Miami has stormed out of the gate by beating No. 21 Notre Dame, South Florida and Florida. But Oregon had maybe the best single win of the first month with the double-overtime victory at No. 6 Penn State, along with additional Power Four wins against Oklahoma State and Northwestern and a rivalry win against Oregon State. The Ducks look like a powerhouse.

Most improved team: No. 8 Oklahoma

After fumbling through a rocky SEC debut, the Sooners have quickly rebounded thanks to a drastic offensive reboot that included the addition of transfer quarterback John Mateer. While Mateer's hand injury could sideline him for a month, Oklahoma remains a major Playoff contender with conference play about to kick into high gear. A difficult schedule gives them some wiggle room if the Sooners can bag some quality wins.

Surprise team: No. 18 Vanderbilt

After reaching and winning the Birmingham Bowl last season, Vanderbilt

Ole Mississippi coach Lane Kiffin has led the Rebels to a 5-0 start that bodes well for their College Football Playoff credentials. JUSTIN FORD/GETTY has taken another step forward with the program's second 5-0 start in the modern era. The face of this surge has been quarterback Diego Pavia, one of several New Mexico State transfers who have changed the complexion of the program and the Commodores' strongest Heisman Trophy contender in almost a century.

Disappointing team: Clemson

The offense stinks. Again. The defense has just two takeaways in three games against the Power Four. The Tigers have dropped three of four to open the year for the first time since 2004. Seen as one of the top teams in the Football Bowl Subdivision back in August, Clemson isn't even the best Power Four team in South Carolina.

Best conference: Big Ten

With the top two teams in this week's US LBM Coaches Poll and four of the top nine, the Big Ten has delivered on pre-season expectations while the best teams in the SEC have struggled to stay afloat during the early part of the league's meat-grinder regular season. The final two months should provide more clarity of the picture, but it's a nice start for the Big Ten.

Heisman Trophy leader: QB Dante Moore, Oregon

The Heisman odds have changed almost weekly, cycling through a series of favorites – Cade Klubnik, Arch Manning, Mateer, Fernando Mendoza – before Moore took over to end the month after his brilliant performance against the Nittany Lions. The redshirt sophomore completed 29 of 39 throws for 248 yards and three touchdowns in the win, giving him 14 scores against just one interception through five games.

Breakout star: QB Trinidad Chambliss, Ole Miss

The former Ferris State transfer was expected to hold a clipboard for Austin Simmons but was thrust into the lineup after Simmons was injured late in the win against Kentucky. Chambliss has at least 385 yards of total offense in each of his three starts with six combined touchdowns as the Rebels have ascended into the top five.

Best non-quarterback: DL Rueben Bain Jr., Miami

After battling injuries in 2024, Bain has been the most dominant defender in the country since posting six tackles, a half-sack and an interception in Miami's win against the Fighting Irish. Against Florida, the junior had seven tackles, one for loss, and 10 quarterback pressures. So far, he's putting together a year that ranks favorably among the best by a defensive lineman in recent FBS history.

Best coach: Lane Kiffin, Ole Miss

He's pushed all the right buttons for the unbeaten Rebels, who may be one of the safest bets for the Playoff with just two more games against team in this week's US LBM Coaches Poll. Whether they remain on track could depend on where Kiffin lands on the unexpected quarterback controversy between Simmons and Chambliss.

Best first-year coach: Dan Mullen, UNLV

Mullen is the only first-year coach still unbeaten after leading UNLV to wins against Idaho State, Sam Houston State, UCLA and Miami (Ohio). While three of these wins were decided by a possession – and it's not like this is a murderer's row of competition – the former Mississippi State and Florida coach has successfully carried over the foundation set in place by his predecessor, Barry Odom.

Biggest upset: South Florida 18, Florida 16

Eighteen-point underdogs heading into Gainesville, South Florida's win was the biggest upset of September by point spread and one of the most impactful results overall. In addition to spoiling the Gators' season and ushering in the end of Florida coach Billy Napier's tenure, the win is another feather in the cap for the American in the fight with the Mountain West and Sun Belt for Group of Five supremacy.

Best game: Oregon 30, Penn State 24 (Sept. 27)

In terms of talent level, drama and overall meaning, it's hard to top the Ducks' double-overtime win in Happy Valley. Oregon led 17-3 early in the fourth quarter before Drew Allar sparked a pair of touchdown drives to force overtime. After exchanging touchdowns in the first extra frame, Oregon scored to open the second overtime but missed the two-point try. Penn State's ensuing possession ended with an Allar interception, marking the second time in as many games against top-five competition the Nittany Lions have been ruined by a late turnover.

Coach on the hot seat: Billy Napier, Florida

Four major-conference coaches have already been fired in Virginia Tech's Brent Pry, UCLA's Deshaun Foster, Oklahoma State's Mike Gundy and Arkansas' Sam Pittman. Barring an epic recovery against a brutal schedule, Florida will eventually part ways with Napier and end the most unsuccessful coaching tenure in modern program history.

Best transfer: QB Carson Beck, Miami

One year after coach Mario Cristobal hit pay dirt with Washington State transfer Cam Ward, Beck has been the nation's most influential transfer and the main reason for the Hurricanes' unbeaten start. While he struggled amid rough weather conditions in the win against Florida, Beck is completing 73.2% of his attempts with seven touchdowns.

Best freshman: DL Sidney Stewart, Maryland

Stewart is one of several freshmen occupying major roles for the surprisingly unbeaten Terrapins. After missing his senior season in high school due to ineligibility issues, he has posted a sack and at least one tackle for loss in all four games. That gives Stewart an edge over Ohio State running back Bo Jackson, who has run for 297 yards on 8.5 yards per carry, and Cal quarterback Jaron-Keawe Sagapolutele, a big reason for the Golden Bears' 4-1 start.
