Fitzpatrick brothers make Zurich history

Adam Schupak
Golfweek | USA TODAY NETWORK

Alex and Matt Fitzpatrick do some of their best work as a pair.

When Alex was 14 years old, he cad-died for his brother, Matthew, 17, at the time, at the 2013 U.S. Amateur. Alex still remembers the prize that he received for big bro winning the Havemeyer Trophy.

“My goal for the week was winning an iPhone off my dad, who promised me, if we won the tournament,” Alex recalled. “Obviously he never expected (us) to.”

He got something much better for teaming with his brother to win the Zurich Classic at New Orleans on April 26 – a two-year exemption on the PGA Tour.

Asked if he would accept membership, Alex smiled and said, “I am, indeed, yeah, yeah. I signed as quick as I could. I’m still shaking.”

The Fitzpatricks combined to make birdie in the foursome format at the par-5 18th to shoot 1-under 71 at TPC Louisiana in the Crescent City suburb of Avondale to edge Alex Smalley and Hayden Springer and Kristoffer Reitan and Kris Ventura by one stroke and become the first brothers and family members to win the title. Matt, who won for the third time in his last five starts, became the first player in over two years to win in back-to-back events.

Matt splashed out of the front green-side bunker at 18 and spun it to a foot and Alex tapped in the birdie putt to secure the win with a 72-hole total of 31-under 257.

“I got to the ball, and the lie was unbelievable. I couldn’t have placed it on a better tee,” Matt said of the bunker shot. “I played it to perfection. What more can I say?”

The Englishmen built a four-stroke lead entering the final round after a 57 on April 25 set a tournament-low 18-hole score in the Four-Ball format since 2017. Matt said he didn’t realize until their post-round press conference they had made birdie at the last five holes.

It looked as if the brothers Fitzpatrick would coast to victory in the Big Easy but closing on Sundays on the PGA Tour is rarely a walk in the park. They made three birdies in the first 11 holes but it began unraveling when Matt drove right and behind a tree at 12. Alex’s punch shot ricocheted off a tree and it cost them dearly – their first double bogey of the week. They escaped with par at 13 after a poor approach shot by Matt thanks to Alex floating a world-class lob shot to tap-in range. However, they weren’t so lucky at the par-3 14th, where Matt’s tee shot into another bunker resulted in bogey, and their lead was gone.

“You wonder who is feeling more nervous now,” said Daniel Chopra, an analyst on PGA Tour Radio. “Is it Matt playing for his brother or Alex trying to get his first win on the PGA Tour?”

Matt said he felt as if he had lost his swing, but as he walked up the 15th hole, his father, Russ, stood along the right side of the rope line and egged on his oldest son to “keep going.”

“That was really nice,” recalled Matt, who nailed a clutch 8-foot par putt. “That was a really nice moment for me personally.”

Alex wasn’t the only one seeking his first PGA Tour title. Smalley and Springer, both 29, bogeyed the first and sixth but sprinkled six birdies on the card through the first 16 holes to tie for the lead. There was a Norwegian team sharing the same first name and trying to steal the trophy, too. At 18, Reitan, 28, drilled a fairway wood from 232 yards that rolled to 7 feet and Ventura, 31, buried it to close out a 7-under 65. It was their third eagle of the day, offset by two back-nine bogeys, and allowed them to be first to post 30-under 258.

Moments later, Springer gunned his 44-foot birdie putt 10 feet past the hole at 17 and Smalley missed the comeback-er. But they carded a birdie at the last to finish off a 4-under 68 and match the Norwegians.

Alex never wavered in his belief that his brother, the third-ranked golfer in the world, would rediscover his mojo. He watched from the gallery this time when Matt returned nearly a decade after winning the U.S. Amateur at The Country Club and won the 2022 U.S. Open there in storybook fashion. When the Fitzpatrick brothers first played in the PGA Tour’s lone team event in 2023, Matt described he and Alex, who played at Wake Forest University and was a two-time member of the Great Britain & Ireland Walker Cup team, as close despite being polar opposites.

“I’m organized, he’s unorganized. He’s happy, I’m miserable,” Matt said. “Yeah, that’s probably a good way to put it really.”

After his bunker shot spun to a stop by the hole at 18 to set up the winning putt, Matt put his arm around Alex just as he had all those times when they were growing up at Hallamshire Golf Club, their home golf club in Sheffield.

The Fitzpatricks became the 13th set of brothers to each have a victory on the PGA Tour and the first to do so in the last 20 years. Other brothers of recent vintage who have played in the pro ranks include Brooks and Chase Koepka, Nick and Curtis Thompson, whose sister Lexi has been the most successful of the bunch, and British Open winner Francesco Molinari and brother Eduardo, who were Ryder Cup teammates.

“To win a team event on the PGA Tour with my brother, I don’t know if it does get better than that,” said Matt, who claimed his fifth PGA Tour title.

Alex secured his first win on the DP World Tour at the Hero Indian Open just one week after Matt’s victory at the Val-spar Championship last month. Now they are both PGA Tour winners, and for Alex it means exemptions into this week’s Cadillac Championship, three remaining signature events this season, the 2026 PGA Championship, and the 2027 Players Championship.

“I couldn’t feel my hands; I couldn’t feel my legs; I couldn’t feel anything,” Alex said. “It’s a pretty life-changing thing.”

Nelly Korda cruises to third LPGA major title

Beth Ann Nichols
Golfweek | USA TODAY NETWORK

HOUSTON – Nelly Korda wanted to send a message at the Chevron Championship, to herself and to everyone looking up to her: It’s OK to miss short putts.

“You’re going to make mistakes,” said Korda. “You have to mentally still be in it 100%, and that’s really what I wanted to show. I wanted to show it to myself, and I wanted to show it to everyone looking up to me.”

The truth of the matter is that Korda putted beautifully throughout the week. Sure there were miscues, but she won the mental war. Korda credited work with new putting coach David Angelotti for giving structure to her putting practice and an overall sense of calmness.

“He’s a no-nonsense guy, black and white,” said Jason McDede of Angelotti’s style. “There’s no cheerleading involved.”

Korda took control at Memorial Park on Day 1 and never relented, building her lead to as many as eight as she set or matched scoring records throughout the week. In the final round April 26, the lead never dipped lower than four strokes. She ultimately won by five at 18 under, with major champions Patty Tavatanakit and Ruoning Yin taking a share of second.

After a weather-shortened victory to start the season at the Hilton Grand Vacations Tournament of Champions, Korda took a six-week break from competition and came back to finish runner-up three times.

“She played incredible through all the crap that people have talked about her not being able to finish the last couple weeks or always finishing second,” said older sister Jessica Korda. “She completely put it out of her mind and stuck to her own game and kind of showed everybody, like, stuff you. We always love that.”

Korda, 27, became the first American since Meg Mallon in 2000 to win a third major championship title. Since 1990, only Betsy King, Patty Sheehan and Mallon have managed to win three majors. Korda makes it four.

Now a 17-time winner on the LPGA, becomes the sixth American player to have won a major before the age of 28, joining Patty Berg, Louise Suggs, Betsy Rawls, Mickey Wright, Kathy Whitworth and Amy Alcott.

“It’s not easy being young out here,” said Jessica, winner of six LPGA titles. “I mean, in your early 20s, you’re trying to figure yourself out, at the same time, being an American, everyone’s kind of stripping you down, and every single part of your game, and it’s hard not to listen to the noise sometimes. I think you see Americans come through a little bit later on in their career to win a lot of tournaments, too.”

While Korda opened with back-to-back 65s to set a new 36-hole scoring record, her father, Petr, was more impressed by the two 70s she shot over the weekend, praising the way she handled the pressure.

Korda went into the final round with a five-shot lead and worked hard to protect it, changing her strategy to the point it felt uncomfortable. It worked.

“It’s not easy going in with that big of a lead,” said Korda. “I think that you have almost like a bigger target because maybe girls are like, we have nothing to lose so we’re going to go after everything.

“For me I’m like having to play defensive at some point but also not wanting to get too defensive because I want to play my own game. That’s where I struggled this weekend of, OK, I wanted to be aggressive on this hole, but if I make a big mistake, I mean, that cuts my lead.

“So having to kind of adjust with that mindset, I think that’s what was really tough. I’m not a player that loves to play defensive.”

There’s no doubt that Korda’s scheduling played a key role in how the week unfolded. She opted to skip last week’s event in Los Angeles to get in earlier and an avoid an awkward Sunday red-eye. Instead, Korda played an early 18 holes on April 20 and got her first look at Memorial Park before storms interrupted practice the next two days. She was refreshed after a two-week break and hungry to get over the finish line.

Throughout the week in Houston, Korda talked about her mental outlook, how happy she felt in her personal life and with her team. The maturation process, she said on April 26, was a big reason why she finished the day sitting on a dais next to the trophy.

“Last year was definitely a super frustrating year. You know, everyone was talking about my stats,” she said. “I would come into a room like this and everyone would be like, you know, your stats are great, better than last year, but you have zero trophies under your name this year.

“I’m like, I see that, yes. “It just wears on you because that’s what you’re working for. ... You’re like, OK, I don’t want to reinvent the wheel. I don’t want to do anything crazy. But I do want to get better. So what am I going to do better? The first thing was I was getting frustrated last year on the golf course and I started overanalyzing everything and I started overthinking, and then that was paralyzing me.

“I told myself I don’t ever want to feel like that on a golf course.”

She found there’s power in letting go. When it came time for the traditional champion’s leap, Korda took on the plunge pool with her team – including young nephew Greyson – with a masterful cannonball.

“Everyone is going to have their own opinion,” said Korda. “My opinion is if you kill a tradition, it’s going to be gone forever.”

With Korda, it carries on.

Hard Rock thumping with F1 Miami GP, World Cup

Hal Habib
The Palm Beach (Florida) Post
USA TODAY NETWORK

MIAMI GARDENS, FL – They spent well into seven figures building a boat that will never touch the water and will be torn apart faster than the Titanic.

It's that kind of year at Hard Rock Stadium.

A year no one could soon forget.

When the checkered flag for the Formula 1 Miami Grand Prix was waved the afternoon of May 3 for 19-year-old Kimi Antonelli, it was the final act of a project that required 3 ½ months of construction. But that checkered flag also served as a green light to tear down hundreds of structures before the next big thing comes to town.

That next act: merely the largest sporting event in the world. The FIFA men's World Cup.

That's the story for Hard Rock Stadium this dizzying year of 2026. Prep for one monster sporting event, invite the crowd in, tear it all down. Rinse, repeat.

When the Florida Panthers won back-to-back Stanley Cups, we celebrated, just as we have when the Dolphins, Heat, Marlins and Inter Miami won championships. Makes sense. On a whole different level, maybe we should take a deep breath and appreciate what is happening now, even in this playoff-less late spring.

The journey began with Indiana and Miami deciding college football's national championship in a thriller. Then we welcomed the world's best men's and women's tennis players for the Miami Open, then just hosted an F1 race that a handful of years ago would have been a pipe dream, and now we can look forward to seven World Cup matches, including a quarterfinal, that was Joe Robbie's dream when he built this place.

It's a lineup that can hold its own against any stadium in the country.

Katharina Nowak, president of the Miami Grand Prix, goes one step further, crediting her cast of thousands, including those who worked nights to beat the clock, with pulling off "the type of stuff we do at Hard Rock Stadium that really no other stadium does in the world."

What? South Florida isn't worthy of Super Bowls anymore?

Too bad the NFL doesn't see it that way. Reports surfaced with Dolphins owner Stephen Ross saying that South Florida, once a staple in the Super Bowl rotation, is on the outs because it no longer meets the league's requirements for the event, including insufficient hospitality space. Because the NFL is following Spirit Airlines to the poor house, you understand.

Talk about putting a damper on the weekend that not even the skies could pull off. Speaking of which, the entire race was virtually totally dry despite concerns of a deluge that led organizers to move up the start by three hours.

Once it was lights out at 1 p.m. ET, drivers put on a dramatic show, but so did their teams with steady and conflicting forecasts. It was going to come down in buckets or not at all. Take your pick. Just hope you have the right tires for the occasion.

Antonelli had all the right answers.

"This is just the beginning," he said

Soccer star Lionel Messi and his son, Thiago, were in the garage of Mercedes' Kimi Antonelli ahead of the Miami Grand Prix. Messi might play in the World Cup for Argentina. BRIAN SNYDER/REUTERS

That's the price of refusing to let a good idea go to waste.

"Anything's possible with the right support," Clark said.

Anything, such as setting up eight "neighborhoods" throughout the F1 campus to mimic South Florida's eclectic communities. There was a little Little Havana. Miami Beach. Coconut Grove. And, yes, Miami Gardens. They each had their own motif and corresponding cuisine.

"Now that we've done the MSC Yacht Club, my mind's starting to go, 'What else can we do that's never been seen or done before?'" Clark said.

One race is over, now race begins to prep for World Cup

With the F1 leaving town, FIFA soon will arrive.

"Every minute counts here," Clark said, explaining that FIFA expects "a clean and clear site" for World Cup preparations for the first match here, June 15. Outside of the stadium and garage, everything (including the yacht) will head into storage until next year.

Soon after the paddock inside the stadium is removed, a new batch of grass will be trucked down from Palm Beach County and stitched together by FIFA to form the World Cup playing surface. The one fortunate break is that when Robbie built the stadium, he did so with a field meeting FIFA specifications. While many stadiums are ripping out lower-level seats, Hard Rock is able to add nine rows. One wrinkle: The name "Hard Rock Stadium" will be concealed during the tournament. It'll simply be "Miami Stadium" to meet FIFA's restrictions regarding sponsorship.

The consolation match, on July 18, will wrap up this 6 ½-month sports buffet. Hard Rock Stadium, the largest Airbnb in South Florida, will be occupied by its regular tenants, the Dolphins and Hurricanes.

For most of the fall, anyway. Bruno Mars and Usher have concerts scheduled for the stadium that never rests.
