Hard Rock thumping with F1 Miami GP, World Cup

Hal Habib
The Palm Beach (Florida) Post
USA TODAY NETWORK

MIAMI GARDENS, FL — They spent well into seven figures building a boat that will never touch the water and will be torn apart faster than the Titanic. It's that kind of year at Hard Rock Stadium.

A year no one could soon forget. When the checkered flag for the Formula 1 Miami Grand Prix was waved the afternoon of May 3 for 19-year-old Kimi Antonelli, it was the final act of a project that required 3½ months of construction. But that checkered flag also served as a green light to tear down hundreds of structures before the next big thing comes to town.

That next act: merely the largest sporting event in the world. The FIFA men's World Cup.

That's the story for Hard Rock Stadium this dizzying year of 2026. Prep for one monster sporting event, invite the crowd in, tear it all down. Rinse, repeat. When the Florida Panthers come back-to-back Stanley Cups, we celebrated, just as we have when the Dolphins, Heat, Marlins and Inter Miami won championships. Makes sense. On a whole different level, maybe we should take a deep breath and appreciate what is happening now, even in this playoff-less late spring.

The journey began with Indiana and Miami deciding college football's national championship in a thriller. Then we welcomed the world's best men's and women's tennis players for the Miami Open, then just hosted an F1 race that a handful of years ago would have been a pipe dream, and now we can look forward to seven World Cup matches, including a quarterfinal, that was Joe Robbie's dream when he built this place. It's a lineup that can hold its own against any stadium in the country. Katharina Nowak, president of the Miami Grand Prix, goes one step further, crediting her cast of thousands, including those who worked nights to beat the clock, with pulling off "the type of stuff we do at Hard Rock Stadium that really no other stadium does in the world."

What? South Florida isn't worthy of Super Bowls anymore?

Too bad the NFL doesn't see it that way. Reports surfaced with Dolphins owner Stephen Ross saying that South Florida, once a staple in the Super Bowl rotation, is on the outs because it no longer meets the league's requirements for the event, including insufficient hospitality space. Because the NFL is following Spirit Airlines to the poor house, you understand.

Talk about putting a damper on the weekend that not even the skies could pull off. Speaking of which, the entire race was virtually totally dry despite concerns of a deluge that led organizers to move up the start by three hours.

Once it was lights out at 1 p.m. ET, drivers put on a dramatic show, but so did their teams with steady and conflicting forecasts. It was going to come down in buckets or not at all. Take your pick. Just hope you have the right tires for the occasion.

Antonelli had all the right answers.

"This is just the beginning," he said

Soccer star Lionel Messi and his son, Thiago, were in the garage of Mercedes' Kimi Antonelli ahead of the Miami Grand Prix. Messi might play in the World Cup for Argentina. BRIAN SNYDER/REUTERS during the celebration. "The road is long."

Nobody has to tell the folks at Hard Rock Stadium. It's one thing to pull off this chameleon act so many times within a period of 148 days, it's another thing to do it the way Ross demands: sparing no expense. Looking around the F1 campus, you'd find about 250 structures you'll never see for a Dolphins game.

"Everything — the infrastructure, the power, the plumbing — everything you pretty much see is temporary," said Natalie Clark, senior director of event operations. "So all of it, that takes us 3½ months to build, has to be removed, right? So we're under the gun. Sunday night, the race finishes and we're all very excited and then immediately we start loading out. So we have about 25 days to remove everything off of our site that has been built up for the last 3½ months. And then they start building the World Cup."

The month leading into F1 weekend turned into a sprint for the crew, including those who worked the 10 p.m. to 7 a.m. shift, refueling the machinery, chlorinating the nine pools, anything that can be done without keeping the neighbors awake. That's the other element of these transformations that are easy to overlook.

"When the tennis tournament takes place in the last two weeks of March, we are focusing our attention further away from the stadium, because obviously we're sensitive to noise, that the tennis players don't experience noise in the background," said Todd Boyan, senior vice president of stadium operations.

It's the kind of jigsaw puzzle that makes Nowak grateful for all those hours as a kid playing Tetris.

All this work, and then they dismantle it

Nowak was the one married to the idea of building the MSC replica yacht that towered over all but the stadium itself. After she first commissioned an architect to produce a drawing, she turned up her nose at the result. She didn't want a tugboat; she wanted luxury. She got it. Five levels including a captain's deck on a yacht 264 feet long, 96 feet wide and about five stories high, with a 360-degree view of the track and campus. Buried below the ship is "The Underworld," the kitchen. Sea bass has to be cooked somewhere.

"You've done all this work to make this incredible experience and then within minutes we dismantle it," Clark said.

That's the price of refusing to let a good idea go to waste.

"Anything's possible with the right support," Clark said.

Anything, such as setting up eight "neighborhoods" throughout the F1 campus to mimic South Florida's eclectic communities. There was a little Little Havana. Miami Beach. Coconut Grove. And, yes, Miami Gardens. They each had their own motif and corresponding cuisine.

"Now that we've done the MSC Yacht Club, my mind's starting to go, 'What else can we do that's never been seen or done before?'" Clark said.

One race is over, now race begins to prep for World Cup

With the F1 leaving town, FIFA soon will arrive.

"Every minute counts here," Clark said, explaining that FIFA expects "a clean and clear site" for World Cup preparations for the first match here, June 15. Outside of the stadium and garage, everything (including the yacht) will head into storage until next year.

Soon after the paddock inside the stadium is removed, a new batch of grass will be trucked down from Palm Beach County and stitched together by FIFA to form the World Cup playing surface. The one fortunate break is that when Robbie built the stadium, he did so with a field meeting FIFA specifications. While many stadiums are ripping out lower-level seats, Hard Rock is able to add nine rows. One wrinkle: The name "Hard Rock Stadium" will be concealed during the tournament. It'll simply be "Miami Stadium" to meet FIFA's restrictions regarding sponsorship.

The consolation match, on July 18, will wrap up this 6½-month sports buffet. Hard Rock Stadium, the largest Airbnb in South Florida, will be occupied by the regular tenants, the Dolphins and Hurricanes.

For most of the fall, anyway.

Bruno Mars and Usher have concerts scheduled for the stadium that never rests.

NBA DRAFT LOTTERY WINNERS, LOSERS

Wizards nailed down 1 while Pacers lost out

Lorenzo Reyes
USA TODAY

It's fitting that the NBA draft lottery coincides with spring.

It's the chance for some of the most disadvantaged teams in the league to have their fortunes revived through the draft. And this year is particularly noteworthy for a few reasons.

For one, this is projected to be a generational draft class loaded with elite talent like AJ Dybantsa from BYU and Darryn Peterson of Kansas, though it's also a very deep group.

For another, this year was also noteworthy because of the overt tanking that took place in the final months of the regular season, when the worst teams not-so-subtly self-sabotaged their on-court performance with the hopes of securing one of these top picks. The lottery May 10 determined whether all that tanking was worth it.

Here are the winners and losers from the draft lottery:

WINNERS Bulls

No team saw a bigger jump in the lottery than the Bulls, who entered with the ninth-best odds to sneak into the top four. The Bulls did just that, leaping up to No. 4. Chicago does have some nice pieces but has lacked a star player who can create his own shot. The draft should fix that. Also, after Billy Donovan stepped down as coach, this leap up the board suddenly makes the vacant Chicago job a lot more appealing.

John Wall delivers for the Wizards

Wall, the last player Washington selected No. 1 overall, had represented the Wizards in the 2011 lottery, a year when Washington fell to No. 6 and drafted Jan Vesely. This time, Wall came through. The Wizards, who had the worst record in the NBA at 17-65, secured the No. 1 selection and suddenly are in an enviable position. They brought on some veterans in Trae Young and Anthony Davis, have some young pieces in Alexandre Sarr, Kyshawn George and Tre Johnson and will now get the chance to take their pick of Dybantsa or Peterson.

The Jazz are about to turn the corner

Let's give Danny Ainge some credit (after he got a dose of good luck). The Jazz fully embraced the tank, pulling their starters in the fourth quarters of games, and now they'll hold the No. 2 overall pick. Utah already had some solid, young pieces, especially after it made the trade to acquire Jaren Jackson Jr. Pairing him with Lauri Markkanen, Ace Bailey, center Walker Kessler (who will be returning from a shoulder injury) and the No. 2 overall pick instantly gives the Jazz a fascinating and dynamic roster – and one that could be sneaky competitive as soon as next season.

Grizzlies may find their Ja Morant replacement

Jumping up three spots – from No. 6 to No. 3 – could put the Grizzlies in an excellent spot to feel comfortable moving on from Ja Morant, whom the team reportedly made available in trade talks before the February deadline. If Darryn Peterson falls to No. 3, he could be an excellent fit. Peterson has plenty of size at 6-foot-5, can handle the ball and has a natural scoring ability. Perhaps the thing Memphis would like most about Peterson is that he protected the ball, committing just 1.6 turnovers per game.

The Bulls, with guard Collin Sexton already on the roster, hold the No. 4 pick. ANNA CARRINGTON/IMAGINAGES

Clippers rebuild on the fly

Los Angeles, even after it turned its season around, probably wasn't going to compete this season in the Western Conference. So the Clippers shrewdly – and with a bit of luck – essentially turned Ivica Zubac into the 2026 No. 5 selection (more on that below), a 2029 unprotected first and Benedict Mathurin, who showed immense promise as a scorer off the bench. The Clippers also added Darius Garland in the James Harden trade. All of which means, now with the No. 5 pick in their possession, the Clippers – who entered the season as the oldest team in NBA history – can complete a mini-rebuild on the fly.

Pelicans catch a break

It's not that they won the lottery or even moved up, the Pelicans are winners here because their selection moved down. To start, New Orleans doesn't even hold its own first-round pick in the 2026 draft; during last year's draft, the Pelicans traded that selection to the Hawks – and made it unprotected – to move up 10 spots to No. 13 and select Derik Queen. Yet the Pelicans struggled this season and ended up with the seventh-best odds to win the lottery (6.8%) and a 29.3% chance of securing a Top 4 pick. In the end, the pick the Pelicans will trade to Atlanta is the No. 8 selection, which is still a very good pick, but nowhere near as painful had it been a Top 4 selection, or even No. 1.

LOSERS Pacers and trade for Ivica Zubac

The entered the draft with a 14% chance to claim the No. 1 overall selection and a 52.1% chance to land a Top 4 pick, tied for highest among all teams. Yet the Pacers landed in the worst possible place. They sent their first-round selection to the Clippers in the trade that landed center Ivica Zubac. That pick, however, was protected for picks No. 1-4 and 10-30. That means that if the pick fell anywhere between that 5-9 range, it would go to Los Angeles.

Indiana nearly made it, but with its selection landing at No. 5, it was the last hurdle the Pacers had to clear to secure a Top 4 pick. So instead of pairing an elite talent with a healthy Tyrese Haliburton, Pascal Siakam and Zubac, Indiana's gap year ends up as a significant letdown. It also puts a ton of pressure on Zubac to deliver and make the deal worth it. In essence, the Pacers traded away Benedict Mathurin and a couple of first-round draft picks – one of which became the No. 5 selection in a deep draft – for Zubac.

Nets

A fall of three spots might not initially appear to be so terrible, but in this draft it likely means the difference between a great player and a generational one. The Nets had the third-worst record in the NBA (20-62) and are a very young team, one that made first first-round selections last season. Assuming most predraft projections hold true, the third pick could've netted Brooklyn someone like Caleb Wilson, the North Carolina star who is climbing up draft boards because of his blend of size, skill and athleticism. The Nets should still secure a very good player at No. 6, but the lottery wasn't kind to a team that has won just 46 games over the last two seasons.

NBA draft combine

The NBA draft combine officially began on May 10 at Wintrust Arena in Chicago and runs through May 17. It is not open to the public.

Prospects with most at stake

Darryn Peterson, Kansas: The Kansas star doesn't have to show NBA teams he might be the best prospect in this draft class based on talent. They know that. But if he's to be the No. 1 pick, Peterson will have to prove to the Washington Wizards front office that the mysterious health issues surrounding his availability with the Jayhawks were indeed just a one-off due to the introduction of creatine into his workout regimen. Peterson's medical evaluation with the NBA at the scouting combine is likely to be scrutinized as much as any prospect.

Nate Ament, Tennessee: Ament began this season at Tennessee rated as a potential top-10 pick in the draft. An intriguing but inconsistent freshman year has him hovering with a group of prospects who could go in the lottery or fall to late in the first round. Ament is perhaps the most intriguing because of his length as a wing and long-term development possibilities. He could benefit from the measurement portion of the combine. Ament nearly returned to the Vols for a lucrative name, image and likeness (NIL) offer, according to multiple reports, so his draft position will determine whether he made the right decision.

Koa Peat, Arizona: Peat, like Ament, watched his draft stock slide a bit despite a relatively successful freshman season at Arizona. There are concerns about Peat's lack of perimeter shooting and whether his physical style can translate to the NBA. What his measurements are at the combine, as well as how we he does in shooting drills, will help dictate if he's closer to a potential lottery pick or more like a fringe first-round pick.

Jayden Quaintance, Kentucky: The 6-foot-10 center played just four games at Kentucky this past season after spending his first year of college at Arizona State and suffering a torn ACL. The five-star recruit has been pegged as a potential lottery pick for years and showed flashes of becoming a defensive force at Arizona State. He can show NBA evaluators in Chicago that he has put the knee injury behind him and cement his status as a lottery pick and possible steal in this deep class.

Allen Graves, Santa Clara: Graves blossomed into a 6-foot-9 two-way playmaker as a redshirt freshman while helping Santa Clara make the NCAA Tournament. He has to decide whether to stay in the draft or return to college as one of the most coveted players in the transfer portal. As a 19-year-old who was an under-the-radar recruit out of high school in Louisiana, Graves fits the mold of a player whose stock could improve with a strong showing at the combine. Former Santa Clara standout and current Oklahoma City Thunder star Jalen Williams did just that in 2022 when he became a first-round draft pick.

Knicks sweep with blistering 3-point accuracy

Kristie Ackert
USA TODAY

The New York Knicks came into Philadelphia on May 10 looking to close out an NBA playoff series sweep over the 76ers. Miles McBride made sure it wasn't even close.

McBride led the Knicks with 25 points on 7 of 9 shooting from 3-point range as New York routed the Philadelphia 76ers 144-114 to complete a sweep of the Eastern Conference semifinals. They advance to the conference finals for the second consecutive year.

The Knicks made 24 of 43 attempts from beyond the arc, including a flaming hot 11 of 13 from 3-point range in the first quarter and went into halftime having hit 17 three-pointers to lead 78-53.

Jalen Brunson had 22 points, Karl-Anthony Towns had 17 points and 10 assists, and Josh Hart had 17 points and nine rebounds.

McBride, who started in place of injured OG Anunoby, came back from sports hernia surgery in late March and barely registered in eight appearances before Anunoby's injury forced him into the lineup in Game 3.

The win gave the Knicks their first playoff sweep since 1999.

Public Notices

Public Notices are a permanent and independent record of government and court actions. These include state and local government meetings, rule making, available contracts, zoning changes, and many more, as required by law. In addition, parties to some court proceedings, such as foreclosures, probate, and estate actions are required to publish notices to ensure notification of affected parties, as well as the general public. These notices also alert business owners, large and small, to potential government contractual jobs, helping to ensure economic activity across a level playing field. Public notices have existed to ensure transparency in all levels of government since the founding of the United States.

State and local notices are published in Maine newspapers and are also recorded at mainenotices.com, where anyone can browse or search notices, and sign up to receive email alerts when relevant notices appear.

Public Notices

Public Notices are a permanent and independent record of government and court actions. These include state and local government meetings, rule making, available contracts, zoning changes, and many more, as required by law. In addition, parties to some court proceedings, such as foreclosures, probate, and estate actions are required to publish notices to ensure notification of affected parties, as well as the general public. These notices also alert business owners, large and small, to potential government contractual jobs, helping to ensure economic activity across a level playing field. Public notices have existed to ensure transparency in all levels of government since the founding of the United States.

State and local notices are published in Maine newspapers and are also recorded at mainenotices.com, where anyone can browse or search notices, and sign up to receive email alerts when relevant notices appear.
