MEIJER LPGA CLASSIC

Woad's huge miss helps Yamashita win

Beth Ann Nichols
Golfweek | USA TODAY Network

It looked like Lottie Woad had the title in hand. After a brilliantly holed bunker shot for birdie on the 71st hole at the Meijer LPGA Classic, Woad carried a one-shot lead over Miyu Yamashita into the closing par 5 at Blythefield Country Club near Grand Rapids, Michigan.

Looking back, Woad wishes she had laid up. But she went for it on the 18th, and her third shot from the rough went a little too far past the hole. The former Florida State star needed a two-putt to win and instead lipped out from 3 feet, leaving everyone in shock.

Yamashita

The closing bogey sent Woad back to the 18th tee with Yamashita, a major champion looking for her third career title. It was an overtime battle between the No. 7 (Woad) and the eighth-ranked player in the world, a 13-time winner on the JLPGA.

"I honestly didn't expect it to end up in a playoff," said Yamashita, who birdied the 18th hole in regulation to get to 17 under.

At 4-foot-11, Yamashita, the shortest player on tour, came up big, getting up and down for birdie on the first extra hole to clinch the title. Yamashita was the hottest player all day, carding a closing 8-under 64 to come from five back.

Last year, after winning the AIG Women's British Open, Yamashita zoomed up the board from eight strokes back in Malaysia to win in a playoff. She grew emotional on Father's Day talking about her dad, who doubles as her instructor.

"This week I had really good feeling," said the 24-year-old Yamashita, "so I'm really happy to win."

Wei-Ling Hsu made three birdies and an eagle over her last seven holes at Blythefield Country Club to shoot 67 and take a share of third with China's Yan Liu.

Rookie Riley Smyth made her first cut of the season in her 10th start, taking a share of 12th to earn $51,880.

Woad, 22, hasn't yet been a pro for a full year and already has two LPGA titles to her credit, a top-10 ranking and likely a starring role on the 2026 European Solheim Cup team in the Netherlands.

"I'm already having nightmares about that," joked U.S. captain Angela Stanford, who was working in the booth for CBS.

NTT INDYCAR SERIES

Last to 1st: Lundgaard made 'right moves'

Zion Brown
The Indianapolis Star
USA TODAY Network

Christian Lundgaard celebrates after winning the XPEL Grand Prix at Road America on June 21 at Elkhart Lake. GARY C. KLEIN/USA TODAY NETWORK – WISCONSIN

ELKHART LAKE, WI – Arrow McLaren team principal Tony Kanaan gave Christian Lundgaard a pep talk on the starting grid before the Grand Prix at Road America. The message: Don't make life harder on yourself.

But the Danish driver failed to follow those instructions, and on the first lap of the race June 21, he drove his No. 7 Arrow McLaren Chevrolet into Scott Dixon's No. 9 Chip Ganassi Racing Honda, causing damage to Lundgaard's car.

Lundgaard dipped into pit lane on that first lap, as the No. 7 needed a new front wing and tires. It was crucial for Lundgaard's pit crew to operate quickly so that the car wouldn't get lapped, which it didn't. Still, it didn't seem likely – or even possible – that Lundgaard could make his way from last (25th) to first.

But as the 55-lap race on the 4.014-mile road course progressed, Lundgaard's car kept gaining speed and positions. With Lundgaard having an outside chance of a win, strategist Kyle Moyer decided to gamble.

While most of the race's leaders made their final pit stop three to four laps before Lundgaard – a decision influenced by IndyCar's new and cautious full-course yellow procedure – Moyer kept Lundgaard on track until lap 45, the fifth-latest pit stop in the race. After a brief pit stop due to Lundgaard not needing a full tank of gas to get to the end, he exited pit lane second, behind Marcus Armstrong and ahead of David Malukas.

That was when Lundgaard knew he was in the fight for the win.

"I think ultimately we made the right moves at the right time," Lundgaard said. "Staying out on that last pit sequence is what really gained us the win. But that's also the riskiest thing we could do because we're exposing ourselves to yellow (flags). That was win it or finish last at that time."

Malukas passed Lundgaard on Lundgaard's out lap since Malukas' tires were warmer. But Lundgaard got by Malukas on lap 49, leaving only Armstrong ahead of him.

Lundgaard didn't think he'd catch Armstrong, who Lundgaard felt "should have won this race." But Armstrong's No. 66 Honda engine began to fail on lap 52, allowing Lundgaard to pass Armstrong, whose car completely shut down on the next lap. Lundgaard held off Malukas following the restart to get his second win of the season.

Moyer, who is in his first full season as Arrow McLaren's team manager after being fired by Team Penske last May, made the call that paid dividends in the end. Moyer became the strategist on the No. 7 car this year, and he and Lundgaard have made an excellent pairing through 10 races.

"The one thing I have learned with Kyle is he's not afraid of taking risks," Lundgaard said. "I'm sure it's going to bite us someday. The more races we can win until then, the better. ... He's very aggressive, but he also knows exactly what he's doing. There's no question in his mind. Whenever he makes a mistake, he's honest about it, raises his hand. I think it helps the group move forward. There's never any unanswered questions."

After a 2025 season that saw Lundgaard succeed but come up short of wins on several occasions, the 24-year-old has taken the next step, getting another victory after winning the Sonsio Grand Prix on the IMS road course in May.

Up until the Sonsio Grand Prix, Pato O'Ward was the only driver to win a race for Arrow McLaren since McLaren Racing bought a stake in the team in 2020 and became the majority owner in 2021. This team has been built around O'Ward, who is the most popular driver in the series and has finished top five in five of his six seasons with the team.

But this year, Lundgaard has outperformed his highly regarded teammate, as Lundgaard is fourth in the championship while O'Ward is fifth and Lundgaard is the only Arrow McLaren driver to finish on the podium this season. In his second year at Arrow McLaren, Lundgaard – who is often forgotten among a talented crop of under-30 IndyCar drivers – has become a force.

"I think everything is going according to how I thought it would, right?" Lundgaard said. "First year in the team – obviously Pato is very established in there – it's trying to learn as much as possible together, make the package better. I feel like I've evolved a little bit. I think he's gone a little bit backwards, unfortunately, in terms of results. At the end of the day, I know how good he is."

Lundgaard is a pending free agent, and if it wasn't clear already, Sunday was another data point showing that Arrow McLaren should do all it can to keep him around. Kanaan previously said that he'd wait until after the Indianapolis 500 to talk extensions with Lundgaard and fellow free agent teammate Nolan Siegel, but those talks have not reached the formal stage, according to Lundgaard.

"I feel like right now we're more chitchatting, which is always fun as well," Lundgaard said on Friday. "I'm not worried at all from my own perspective. So we'll see how it goes, but obviously we've done great together, and I see that in the future too."

When asked about a potential extension after the race, Lundgaard said winning a race "never hurts" while grinning. If those talks between him and Arrow McLaren's have indeed been casual, it will be in the team's best interest to accelerate those talks with the driver who's tracking toward back-to-back seasons in the top five.

After winning the Sonsio Grand Prix, Lundgaard said, "I think we've unlocked the door now. I'm pretty confident many more will come." It took only four races for that next win to come after Lundgaard went winless in the last two seasons.

Lundgaard is here to stay as a threat to win, especially on road and street courses. He proved himself with consistent results in 2025, and this year he's proved himself as a winner.

It's Heim Time at Cup Series' Naval Base Coronado

Chris Vinel
The Daytona Beach (Florida) News-Journal
USA TODAY Network

Corey Heim adjusted his hat and stared across the temporary NASCAR track at Naval Base Coronado.

He had just concluded his postrace interview, and his expression said it all.

What the heck just happened?

In the Cup Series' first event at the active military facility on June 21, Heim prevailed from a late battle with Tyler Reddick. He claimed his first victory at NASCAR's highest level in the 13th start of his career. The 23-year-old part-timer for 23XI Racing led the final three laps on the 3.4-mile street course.

"I hope I don't wake up from this dream," Heim said. "I don't know. This is insane."

NASCAR's road king, Shane van Gisbergen, entered the weekend with about the lowest betting odds you'll ever see (-150). But a multiple-car crash ended his day on lap 32 and broke the race wide open. It featured 20 lead changes. Ryan Blaney led a race-best 12 laps.

In the final 10 laps, Heim and Reddick jostled up front. Heim overtook his 23XI teammate with some contact with three laps to go. With two laps remaining, Reddick blew a tire, contributing to Heim's 10.37-second margin of victory.

"Caught a couple breaks with some of the good guys wrecking out," Heim said. "But they don't ask how, just how many."

The answer is now one.

Heim captured the NASCAR Truck Series championship in 2025. He owns 26 victories across six seasons in that series, including three this year.

Last month, 23XI announced it was promoting Heim to the Cup level full-time in 2027.

Driving the No. 91 Chevrolet for Trackhouse Racing, former Formula 1 driver Kevin Magnussen finished 27th in his first NASCAR race but recorded the fastest lap of the day at 2:12.485.

Recruiting

the road to evaluate some at a distance in January, the university confirmed. A year earlier, his predecessor at Michigan, Sherrone Moore, made just two off-campus contacts with recruits, according to university records.

● New Southern University coach Marshall Faulk is following Sanders' model after working with him last year at Colorado. Faulk didn't make any off-campus visits to recruits in his first recruiting season there and said he relied on his assistant coaches to do that instead so he could focus on hosting recruits on-campus.

"I don't think there's a science to how it should be done," Faulk told USA TODAY Sports. "What I believe is, however you decide to do it, you should major in that way."

Historically, head football coaches and their assistants have recruited new players at two places each winter after the season – on university campuses as hosts and off-campus at players' homes and high schools. But as college football has evolved into a professional model with an expanded postseason, head coaches have adapted with different approaches, as detailed by the following data and interviews obtained by USA TODAY Sports.

Texas' Steve Sarkisian didn't hit the road to recruit until the end of the transfer portal Jan. 16 and then made 136 off-campus contacts. BRETT DAVIS/IMAGN IMAGES

Curt Cignetti's recruiting time crunch at Indiana

To help coaches avoid conflict with postseason bowl games and the College Football Playoff, NCAA rules recently have shrunk the time allowed for head coaches to meet with recruits off-campus.

Previously, head coaches were allowed to make contact with recruits off-campus for at least part of December and most of January. But since 2024, head coaches have been restricted from going off campus to contact recruits except during January up to early February. In 2026, the off-campus contact period lasted only 23 days in January, down from 39 days in December 2023 and early 2024.

That's not much time if your team is making a run in the Playoff like Cignetti's.

"He was not able to do so," Indiana athletics spokesman Jeff Keag said.

The previous year, after Indiana's Playoff run ended Dec. 20, 2024, Cignetti made seven off-campus recruiting contacts and evaluations in early 2025 according to Indiana records. Before the calendar shrunk, Cignetti made 38 off-campus recruiting contacts and evaluations in his first recruiting cycle as Indiana's coach in December 2023 and January 2024.

Indiana said Cignetti wasn't available for comment.

Indiana currently ranks No. 41 nationally in high school recruiting for 2027, according to 247Sports, as of June 22.

How the transfer portal changed off-campus recruiting

Coaches also are filling a large part of their rosters with transfers instead of high school players, making off-campus recruiting less necessary after players were allowed unlimited annual transfers for the first time starting in 2024. Home visits to these recruits in the transfer portal are rare because they generally involve older players looking for more money and playing time instead of a sit-down in the living room with their parents.

"When do you make visits to portal guys' homes?" Sanders asked in 2024 in response to a USA TODAY Sports report. "Anybody do that?"

Transfer recruits instead often visit the campuses of the coaches recruiting them. That happened in January, when players were allowed to enter the transfer portal Jan. 2-16. But this transfer period conflicted with eight of the 23 days head coaches were allowed go on the road starting Jan. 5 – another reason for head coaches to stay home and host transfer recruits instead of going on the road to visit high school players.

For example, Texas coach Steve Sarkisian waited until the end of the transfer portal Jan. 16 before hitting the road to recruit. He still recorded 136 off-campus recruiting contacts through the end of the contact period in January, according to school records.

Why Eddie George still values meeting recruits off-campus

Starting last year, players have been getting directly paid by schools through revenue sharing. As a result, home visits from head coaches often might not matter as much as money when trying to convince players to join their team.

But many head coaches still want to meet with players at their high schools or homes for their own reasons despite the changes.

"My perspective is I'm not trying to recruit you, I'm trying to connect with you," Bowling Green State coach Eddie George told USA TODAY Sports. "There's a difference to me. I'm trying to build a relationship that's long-term."

George said he visited about 20 high schools during one week in January.

New UCLA coach Bob Chesney recorded 473 off-campus contacts

After being hired at UCLA on Dec. 6, new Bruins head coach Bob Chesney also waited until the end of the transfer portal window before hitting the road to recruit on Jan. 15. By the end of the month, he recorded 493 off-campus recruiting contacts, according to UCLA records.

One of the goals is to establish relationships with local high schools and meet with several potential recruits at each stop.

Perhaps nobody is a bigger believer in that than Nebraska coach Matt Rhule, who visited 57 high schools in January 2025 and January 2026, according to Nebraska. As the transfer portal closed, Rhule went on the road Jan. 16 and recorded 373 off-campus contacts in January, usually with at least one assistant coach at his side, according to school records. He told USA TODAY Sports in 2024 that recruiting on the road is "the way I was raised."

"They pay me to recruit, you know, so I'm gonna go do it," Rhule said.

Former NFL head coach Bill Belichick visits homes, too

Head coaches typically use the January contact period to recruit high school juniors, with many of the recruits showing off these meetings on social media.

That's because it can be a big deal for these teenagers to be courted by such high-profile coaches on their home turf. For example, high school quarterback Jared Curtis posted photos of North Carolina coach Bill Belichick and Alabama coach Kalen DeBoer at his home in January 2025 before he landed at Vanderbilt.

On Jan. 21, two days after Miami lost to Cignetti's Indiana team in the national championship game, Hurricanes coach Mario Cristobal visited the Florida high school of junior offensive line recruit Sean Tatum.

"Thank you for stopping by," Tatum said on social media with a photo of Cristobal and other Miami coaches. Tatum later committed to play for Miami in 2027.

Sometimes these off-campus trips draw headlines, too, such as when new LSU head coach Lane Kiffin visited recruits in New Orleans in January.

Why Deion Sanders does recruiting differently

Sanders had been unique in that he does not want to go to players' homes or high schools to recruit them and instead only hosts them on-campus in Boulder, as he has this month especially. He cited various reasons, including cost savings and his emphasis on transfer portal recruiting.

Colorado confirmed Sanders again did not make recruiting trips in the last recruiting cycle even though the university gives him a $300,000 annual budget to use of private air travel for recruiting, up from $200,000 in his previous CU contract from 2023 to 2025.

The unusual strategy has worked for Sanders to a degree. His high school recruiting class for 2027 is ranked No. 5 in the Big 12, according to 247Sports, as of June 22. But it still leaves open the question if Sanders would be better at recruiting if he did recruit off-campus. He leaves that to his assistant coaches instead, who have more leeway to recruit off-campus than head coaches.

Why did the recruiting calendar shrink?

The timing and frequency of recruiting trips are regulated by A rules established by the NCAA membership with input from coaches. In addition to the January contact period, assistant football coaches are allowed to go on the road and make contact with recruits in April and May, but not head coaches, according to NCAA bylaw 13.1.2.6.3. Head coaches and assistants also can go on the road to "evaluate" recruits in the fall but not to make contact with them until the contact period in January.

The contact period for head coaches shrunk for a reason.

"Head coaches requested that the December recruiting period go dead to allow them more time to be with their teams in the playoffs and bowl games," said Craig Bohl, executive director of the American Football Coaches Association.

That doesn't mean coaches are devaluing high school recruiting, Bohl said.

"No, but what is important is the timeliness of those recruiting opportunities," Bohl said. "Maintaining high school recruiting is very important to the AFCA."

Marshall Faulk's recruiting approach

Faulk, a Pro Football Hall of Famer like Sanders, is new to the coaching game and has a different way of looking at how to get the best bang for his buck. His only prior coaching experience was as a running backs coach last year at Colorado under Sanders.

Faulk didn't go on the road to recruit players when he was an assistant coach at Colorado, either.

"Literally what I did, I was in my office, and I fielded the calls," Faulk said. "I got on Zoom (calls). I got on FaceTime, I fielded calls. And then when kids were on campus, I recruited the heck out of them."

Faulk cited the lesser resources he has at Southern as a reason he doesn't recruit players off-campus. He said it's more important to be "really good" at hosting recruits on-campus, which he was, according to 247Sports rankings. His 2026 recruiting class is No. 1 in the SWAC.

"When you go to a kid's house, obviously you're sitting in their house and you get to know them and you get to know their family," Faulk said. "But the reality is, the kids need to come sit in your place and come where they're going to be."

Why Kyle Whittingham didn't visit with recruits off-campus

Under the limits of the recruiting calendar, Whittingham had about a month to hit the road for recruiting after being hired there on Dec. 26. He evaluated some recruits off-campus in late January but didn't meet with them, according to Michigan.

"Most of his time was spent transitioning to Michigan; hiring a coaching staff, performance staff, administrative personnel and meeting with the players," Michigan spokesman Dave Ablauf told USA TODAY Sports. "In addition, he spent a large amount of his time meeting with players who were looking to transfer to Michigan."

Do recruits care if they get visited by head coaches?

It depends on the recruit. Sometimes it can play a factor in their decisions, especially when parents are involved. Others don't need it or want it.

Junior defensive lineman Kenny Fairley in Georgia recently committed to play for Colorado in 2027. He said he didn't care that Sanders didn't visit him in Georgia and chose Colorado in large part because of Colorado defensive line coach Dante Carter, who visited him in Georgia twice. Fairley then met with Sanders in-person in Colorado.

"He just told me how much I meant to the program and how he felt about me," Fairley said of Sanders.

Quarterback recruit Andre Adams also committed to Colorado for 2027 and didn't mind that Sanders didn't visit him in his home state of Tennessee. Former Colorado offensive coordinator Pat Shurmur did visit him there in 2024. But Adams' father Kenny noted it would be a big deal if Sanders showed up there.

"Coach Prime, he hadn't been to see anybody, but, well, you know, we're gonna change that," Kenny Adams told USA TODAY Sports. "We gonna change that ... Coach Prime, he won't be wasting his time. He's got a different dog in Dre. ... It might make Coach Prime do something he doesn't usually do."

Public Notices

Public Notices are a permanent and independent record of government and court actions. These include state and local government meetings, rule making, available contracts, zoning changes, and many more, as required by law. In addition, parties to some court proceedings, such as foreclosures, probate, and estate actions are required to publish notices to ensure notification of affected parties, as well as the general public. These notices also alert business owners, large and small, to potential government contractual jobs, helping to ensure economic activity across a level playing field. Public notices have existed to ensure transparency in all levels of government since the founding of the United States.

State and local notices are published in Maine newspapers and are also recorded at mainenotices.com, where anyone can browse or search notices, and sign up to receive email alerts when relevant notices appear.
