Key games on deck in sorting out playoff field

Paul Myerberg

USA TODAY

It's taken Ohio State just two weeks to turn the race for the Big Ten championship into a mere formality.

The Buckeyes have put together easy wins against Nebraska (52-17) and Penn State (38-25) as quarterback Justin Fields has surged into prime Heisman Trophy contention.

Even the 13-point edge over the Nittany Lions, if impressive on its own, doesn't do justice to the Buckeyes' dominance of a projected Big Ten championship contender.

Combined with what's happened elsewhere in the conference – namely Michigan's stunning loss to rival Michigan State - this high level of play has Ohio State on a clear track for the College Football Playoff.

Typically released in early November, the debut playoff rankings were scheduled for Nov. 17 but then moved to Nov. 24 to accommodate this unique regular season. With the Pac-12 not beginning play until this coming weekend, the one-week delay was suggested by Pac-12 Commissioner Larry Scott.

The Pac-12 might factor into the postseason debate. Oregon in particular has the talent and depth to go unbeaten in conference play, though it's impossible to predict how the committee will perceive and compare teams with varying numbers of games played – in fact, that might end up being the defining issue of the championship race.

But the playoff race has started to take focus. Unsurprisingly, three national powers have already staked a spot in the field. Here's how the top four would look today, followed by the four teams just on the outside:

1. Alabama: Want one example of Alabama's Southeastern Conference supremacy? Senior DeVonta Smith has more receiving yards (203) than Mississippi State had total yards (200) in the Crimson Tide's 41-0 shutout.

2. Clemson: D.J. Uiagalelei isn't the only five-star freshman making a difference for the Tigers. Defensive linemen Myles Murphy and Bryan Breese have combined for 46 tackles, 11 tackles for loss, 6 ½sacks and 10 quarterback pressures.

3. Ohio State: Fields has six touchdowns and seven incompletions. Two of those incomplete throws were drops in the end zone by Ohio State receiv-

4. Notre Dame: With surprisingly little attention, the Fighting Irish own the nation's longest active winning streak at 12 games.

5. Georgia: Coach Kirby Smart will again be forced to answer questions about his choice at quarterback after Stetson Bennett threw two interceptions in a sloppy 14-3 win against Kentucky. At the least the Georgia defense is playing at a championship level.

6. Cincinnati: And speaking of good defenses, the Bearcats rank fourth nationally in yards allowed per play (4.22) even after facing two teams (SMU and Memphis) ranked in the top 11 nationally in total offense.

7. Texas A&M: Sophomore running back Isaiah Spiller ranks third in the SEC in yards per game (102.4) and leads the conference in yards per carry

8. Florida: After making 16 interceptions a season ago, Florida has allowed eight touchdowns against one pick in 156 attempts. The Gators are also allowing opponents to complete 66% of their attempts, which ranks 82nd in the Bowl Subdivision.

Two games this Saturday will have a tremendous impact. Clemson goes to Notre Dame in what might be the first of two meetings this season between the two programs, should the loser reach the Atlantic Coast Conference championship game. The loser will remain a contender for the top four.

It's a different scenario in the SEC East, as Georgia and Florida meet in Jacksonville with win-or-go-home stakes.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL USA TODAY NETWORK HEISMAN SURVEY

The coronavirus has messed up just about everything else in 2020, so it shouldn't come as a surprise that it is now affecting the Heisman Trophy race. The weekly USA TODAY Network Heisman survey has a new leader after Clemson quarterback Trevor Lawrence was sidelined with COVID-19. Mac Jones of Alabama grabbed the lead from Lawrence this week, and Ohio State's Justin Fields is closing fast. Jones had the Crimson Tide offense humming again in a romp over Mississippi State. He is averaging 366 passing yards per game with 16 total touchdowns and just two picks.

The voters didn't forget about Lawrence, who remains in second place and was mentioned first by several survey participants. But he could only watch from home as his Tigers rallied from an 18-point first-half deficit to get by Boston College, and he'll remain unavailable for Clemson's biggest game of the regular season Saturday night at Notre Dame.

Lawrence's absence could allow Fields to move past him as well next week. In just two outings, the Buckeyes' signal caller has thrown for 594 yards and six TDs. Zach Wilson of BYU remains on the radar in fourth with a first-place mention. But Friday night's game at Boise State might be his last chance to shine with the Cougars' regular season winding down. - Eddie Timanus
