Johnson energized for final Cup spin

Michelle R. Martinelli
USA TODAY

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. – No matter what happens in the 2020 NASCAR Cup Series season, Jimmie Johnson will retire as one of racing's greatest drivers ever with a record-tying seven championships and 83 wins. But he's not about to let up now.

Johnson announced in November that he'll retire from full-time Cup racing at the end of the 2020 season – which opens with Sunday's Daytona 500 (2:30 p.m. ET, Fox) – although he's made it clear he's not done competing and is open to trying out other styles of racing.

But for the next nine months, his focus is on bouncing back from a recent two-year slump and winning (at least) one more Cup Series race, which would move him into a three-way tie for No. 5 all time with Darrell Waltrip and Bobby Allison.

His first checkered flag since 2017 would also automatically qualify him for the playoffs and give him a shot at a record-breaking eighth championship.

USA TODAY Sports spoke with the seven-time champ Wednesday at Daytona International Speedway about his final season and the new mindset he's embracing.

(Note: This interview has been condensed and edited for clarity.)

Does the start to this season feel any different knowing it's your last full-time run?

Johnson: Pulling in, the flight down, media day, talking about it a lot – I told myself in the offseason I wanted to be present and aware of these opportunities and let it in, so it's there. There's so much excitement in my heart about it all that it's really fun and is bringing energy to me and the team. I know as the year goes on, it will become more emotional, but right now it's just bringing a ton of energy.

Jimmie Johnson is optimistic as he approaches his final full-time season in the NASCAR Cup Series. JOHN DAVID MERCER/USA TODAY SPORTS

Is that nervous or positive energy, and how does it compare to how past Daytona 500s have felt?

Johnson: I haven't been in the trenches yet racing and worried about performance, so I haven't had any nerves yet. It's all been euphoria, unicorn-level stuff of just being happy and great. So I know once we go racing, especially when we get to (Las) Vegas (Motor Speedway, for the second race of the season), the reality of the season, the reality of performance will be there. I'll get knocked down, but right now I'm certainly riding a high of euphoria.

With all that energy, what's the one thing you're most excited about going into this season?

Johnson: Experiencing this year with the people that mean so much to me: Family, (team owner) Rick (Hendrick), my crew guys. To have this bond – the years, the time, the depth of our experience and relationships – the people part of this is what I'm most excited for.

What are you most scared about?

Johnson: I think I'm fearful that I'm not going to be present and enjoy the moments because I'm going to be so worried about competition. So I think that's my biggest challenge. If we get off to a quick start and we win, it's going to be very easy. But if we don't get off to the start that we want, how do I enjoy these moments and not be caught in the competitive side too much?

You recently said you're moving away from the "Chasing 8" mentality in this final season. Have your goals for the season changed if your mindset has?

Johnson: What I didn't recognize is after we won seven, with the notion of being a stand-alone champion at eight, I started chasing something then, and, indirectly, we had come up with this hashtag #Chasing8.

And I had the clarity over the off-season of like, "Holy smokes! I've been out of character." That's not anything I've ever done. I've always just showed up to race and have fun. And that's where I've done my best work. That's where I've won seven championships. That's what I'm going back to.

What's Jimmie Johnson doing 10 years from now?

Johnson: That's a great question. I don't even know what I'm doing next year. Ten years, kids are 19 and 16. I'll be fearful of my girls dating, fearful of them driving, worrying about which college they're going to. Dad stuff.

Would you have any interest in returning to Hendrick in an executive leadership position?

Johnson: I've not played that role to date. I'm not against it either, but it's family, it's home. I still, in the coming years, want to compete, so I'm not sure how that really works. But I wouldn't rule it out. Hendrick's home, Hendrick's family, so I'd consider it.

Do you think you'd be OK if you didn't win one more race?

Johnson: I wouldn't have a choice.

NASCAR legend Johnson has itch for IndyCar

Scott Horner
The Indianapolis Star
USA TODAY Network

Jimmie Johnson to the Indianapolis 500? No way.

But as for other IndyCar races ... The seven-time NASCAR Cup Series champion and four-time Brickyard 400 winner visited NTT IndyCar Series testing Tuesday in Austin, Texas. He expressed interest in tackling road course racing.

"I'm definitely learning," Johnson told the media Tuesday. "This is a totally different world than what I've been used to, but it's a world I dreamed of racing in when I was a kid growing up in San Diego. My heroes were the guys that raced in the Indy 500. I'd go to the Long Beach Grand Prix and watch, hang out and wanted to be in a car going by."

The 44-year-old announced in November that 2020 will be his last full-time season as a Cup Series driver. Sunday at Daytona International Speedway, Johnson posted the fourth-fastest speed in Daytona 500 qualifying.

Johnson is keen on venturing into other forms of racing.

"For me, this is a learning experience and (IndyCar) has always been a bucket list category for me to come see these cars, be around these cars," he said. "(Next year) is open for me and who knows what opportunity might come along in IndyCar, sports cars or back to my off-road roots. I'm just taking it all in and see what comes of it."

He said he has "closed the door" on oval racing after he's done with the Cup Series.
