Medvedev saves match point in win

John Pye
The Associated Press

MELBOURNE, Australia – He lost the first two sets, was low on confidence and was one point from a quarterfinal exit at the Australian Open, so Daniil Medvedev asked himself the question: What would Novak do?

Fair question. Top-ranked Novak Djokovic is a nine-time Australian Open champion who finished one win short of a calendar-year Grand Slam in tennis in 2021.

Modeling himself after the 20-time Grand Slam champion, Medvedev told himself late Wednesday to make Felix Auger-Aliassime fight for every point.

More than one hour after saving a match point on his serve in the fourth set, the US Open champion finished off a 6-7 (4-7), 3-6, 7-6 (7-2), 7-5, 6-4 comeback victory almost a half-hour after midnight.

“He was playing insane, like better than I have ever seen him play. It was unreal,” Medvedev said. “So third set I had zero confidence in myself and in the outcome of the match.”

Medvedev mentioned his thoughts about Djokovic during his on-court TV interview and in a later news conference. He wasn't joking.

“I was not playing my best, and Felix

... was all over me,” Medvedev said. “I didn't know what to do so I (asked) myself, ‘What would Novak do?’

“And I just thought, OK, I'm going to make him work. If he wants to win it, he has to ... fight to the last point.”

Medvedev will have to recover quickly to play Friday against French Open runner-up Stefanos Tsitsipas in a rematch of last year's semifinals at Melbourne Park. Medvedev won at the same stage last year but lost in the final to Djokovic, who wasn't allowed to defend the title this month because he failed to meet Australia's strict COVID-19 vaccination rules.

Tsitsipas had a much easier path to the semifinals, beating No. 11 Jannik Sinner 6-3, 6-4, 6-2 earlier on Day 10.

Both men's quarterfinals had delays mid-match because of rain.

The temperature dropped for the men's quarterfinals from the highs of the afternoon, when Danielle Collins beat Alize Cornet 7-5, 6-1 and 2020 French Open champion Iga Swiatek defeated 36-year-old Kaia Kanepi 4-6, 7-6 (7-2), 6-3.

Collins' win means there are two Americans in the semifinals. Madison Keys, the 2017 U.S. Open runner-up, will play Wimbledon champion Ash Barty.

The women's semifinals are scheduled for Thursday.

After the first three women's quarterfinals were decided in straight sets – top-ranked Barty beat Jessica Pegula and Keys eliminated Barbora Krejčíková on Tuesday – the last one went all the way.

“This match was crazy,” Swiatek said of her up-and-down win.

The temperature reached 97 degrees in that match, continuing a week of hot weather.

As she left the court, Swiatek wrote on the TV camera lens: “Thank you for the support. # Tired.”

US men play El Salvador in Cup qualifier

Jacob Myers
The Columbus Dispatch | USA TODAY Network

COLUMBUS, Ohio – The United States men's national team is in good position to secure one of three guaranteed berths from CONCACAF to the 2022 FIFA World Cup in Qatar entering the home stretch of qualifying. But the stakes of Thursday's qualifier against El Salvador at Lower.com Field are significant.

With two winnable home games, beginning in Columbus on Thursday night (7 ET, ESPN2), and a crucial away game at Canada on Sunday, the USMNT may as well be looking at this penultimate qualifying window as the opportunity to all but lock up a return to the World Cup after failing to qualify in 2018.

Here's everything you need to know ahead of the ninth match of the 14 scheduled games in CONCACAF World Cup qualifying.

USMNT's remaining qualifying schedule

The USMNT will play two of its final three home games of qualification this window, with a lot of pressure to maximize those points ahead of two of the team's most difficult road games, which are coming up in March.

After the Americans play El Salvador on Thursday, it's off to Hamilton, Ontario, to face first-place Canada on Sunday. The Canadians will be highly motivated, having made just one World Cup in 1986. If they beat the U.S., they will have taken four out of six points from both the Americans and Mexico, and, barring a complete collapse, that should ensure the Canadians their second-ever World Cup berth.

U.S. coach Gregg Berhalter's group will finish this window on Feb. 2 in St. Paul, Minnesota, against Honduras. The U.S. knocked off Honduras on the road earlier in qualifying.

The bare minimum for the U.S. this window will be six out of nine points, though at least a draw against Canada for seven points would be exponentially better. That would put the U.S. in optimal position ahead of the challenging final three games.

USMNT qualifying to this point, starting with a draw against El Salvador

This young U.S. team began its 14-game qualifying journey in San Salvador in front of a raucous crowd on Sept. 2, playing El Salvador to a 0-0 draw. The game itself wasn't particularly exciting, and the Americans had few scoring chances.

While the USMNT is much more talented than El Salvador, road games in CONCACAF are notorious for being much more difficult than they appear when just glancing at the rosters. There were only three shots on target in the entire game – two for the U.S. – with possession about even for both teams.

At the time, the USMNT was without star attacking midfielder Christian Pulisic. Berhalter deemed that Pulisic wasn't yet fit enough to play after coming off a bout of the coronavirus. The USMNT was also trying to figure out its striker situation but has since found its No. 1 at the position in 18-year-old Ricardo Pepi, who did not play against El Salvador.

Players openly admitted after the first qualifying window that they were a bit naive thinking they could expect to get all nine points in the first three games, especially with two on the road. The USMNT hasn't been terrific on the road, but it has managed a 1-1-2 record in away qualifiers.

At home, the USMNT has been excellent, especially since a draw against Canada in the game immediately following the tie against El Salvador. The Americans have won three straight home games, including against rival Mexico on Nov. 12 in Cincinnati.

What awaits Thursday night

So far, only goalkeeper Zack Steffen has not arrived with the USMNT. The team announced he was day-to-day with back tightness.

On home soil with a significant talent advantage and a group that has mostly played eight games together, the only question that remains is how the cold late January weather might affect the Americans' play.

Accuweather.com is forecasting a temperature of 30 degrees that will feel like 24 degrees at kickoff, with about a 50% chance for snow flurries during the game.

CONCACAF World Cup qualifying standings

1. Canada (4-0-4, 16 points)
2. USA (4-1-3, 15 points)
3. Mexico (4-2-2, 14 points)
4. Panama (4-2-2, 14 points)
5. Costa Rica (2-3-3, 9 points)
6. Jamaica (1-3-4, 7 points)
7. El Salvador (1-4-3, 6 points)
8. Honduras (0-5-3, 3 points)
